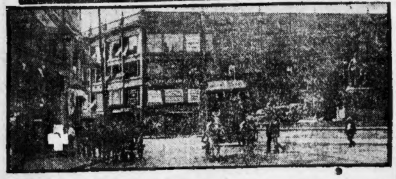
This is an actual picture of a key to a deposit vault in which $1,000 in gold has been placed by the AMERICAN. The key has been hidden, and clews to its whereabouts appear in the story, "Hidden—Not Lost." The finder of the key will get the $1,000. An instalment of the romance containing clews will be found in all editions containing the key in the corner.

DOVES KNOCK OUT TWO PITCHERS

"I Got That $100 at Park Square"



This is a photograph of Frank J. C. Lacy, who ran down one of the clews in "Hidden—Not Lost" and got $100 in gold. Lacy felt what later proved to be the money in its hiding place on Tuesday. He visited the same spot early yesterday, felt the same object—and went away. He visited Park square the third time about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, dislodged the object he had located, and was overjoyed to find that he had won the $100. Look for a good clew in to-day's instalment of the story.

Below is shown the spot where the $100 was secreted and recovered. Many of the searchers will doubtless be surprised to see how near they were to it—and missed it.

FRIDAY LUCKY DAY FOR THE TREASURE HUNTERS

By "The Money Man."

Without appearing to feel egotistical, I should like to call attention to the fact that those who have been following my daily tips on the big gold hunt are getting the money. I told you about a GOOD THING TUESDAY and then had to repeat it again yesterday before anyone got wise. It meant just one round hundred dollars to a Chelsea young man. But I don't want to rub it in.

Now here's a modest suggestion—read the instalment of "Hidden—Not Lost" in to-morrow's AMERICAN, figure out the clews and get after them. If you are CLEVER and PERSISTENT you will lose all your superstition about Friday being an unlucky day.

Keep these facts in mind:

1—There is a key hidden to a safety vault that contains $1,000 in gold. The finder of the key gets the $1,000. The CLEW to the key MAY APPEAR in the story at ANY TIME.

2—There are three handsome lots awaiting competitors. One of these lots is worth $750, another $600 and the third $500.

3—There are hundreds of dollars in gold besides the $1,000 in the deposit vault. There are solid gold watches and a $250 motor cycle. SOMETHING IS FOUND EVERY DAY.

4—For the LADIES EXCLUSIVELY there are a $750 Miller player piano and two watches. These are for the first readers who solve the mystery of Madame Alvarez and suggest the best ending to the story.

P. S.—Ask Frank Lacy of Chelsea how he feels about that $100. Multiply that by ten and figure out how the person will feel who gets the $1,000!

YALE IS FAVORITE FOR VARSITY RACE

Harvard Freshmen Won in Fine Race Against the Blue, but Elis Took the Four-Oared Event.

NEW LONDON, Ct., June 25.—Crowded with thousands of spectators, the observation trains to follow the great Harvard-Yale university boat race pulled out to the starting point this afternoon. The cars were gay with banners, flags and bunting, and the yells of the rival college men could be heard from afar.

The morning races were disposed of early—Harvard winning the freshman eight and Yale the varsity four—and there was a long wait until late this afternoon before there was any further aquatic action. Betting was light, most of the wagers having been made last night. Yale ruled a slight favorite in some of the bets, but the crews went to the starting point on practically even terms as far as wagers were concerned.

If the water should prove anywhere near rough when the crews get fairly going, the conditions are expected to favor the Crimson oarsmen, who proved in the race with Cornell that they can display fine watermanship in a bad sea.

FIRST BLOOD FOR YALE.

Yale won the varsity four-oared race to-day by a length and a half, but Harvard was victorious in the freshman eight-oared contest that followed immediately by the same distance. These races cleared the decks for the great varsity eight-oared battle that was to come late in the afternoon, and to see which thousands of spectators gathered here.

Harvard had won three of the four preliminary races that led up to the final eight-oared contest between the varsity crews, having taken both the freshman four and the graduates' eight yesterday and the freshman eight to-day.

Yale drew first blood in the boat races to-day when the varsity four-oared crew of the Elis defeated the Harvard four by a length and a half in a two-mile contest. The water was rough and the start had to be postponed from the scheduled time of 10:30.

It was 10:51 when the crews were sent away by Referee Mickleham of Columbia. Harvard caught the water first and took a slight lead at the start. Both crews rowed thirty-five strokes to the minute for the first half-mile, and as the flags were passed the Crimson crew had established a lead of half a length.

Both crews displayed excellent watermanship, considering the rough going. Yale spurted passing the half-mile, but could not gain materially on the Crimson at first. Gradually, however, the Elis lessened the distance between the shells, but just before the mile was passed Harvard drew away again and led by more than half a length.

The crews had lowered the stroke to 32, to have some reserve for the final struggle. After passing the mile mark Yale spurted again and rowing rapidly cut down Harvard's lead in short order. The tremendous energy Harvard had utilized to keep in the lead told in the last half of the race and the Crimson went to pieces. The Cambridge four appeared in distress as Yale forged up on even terms.

YALE WINS EASILY.

After that there was nothing to it but Yale and leaving Harvard further behind at every stroke the Elis crossed the finish line nearly a length and a half to the good.

Harvard evened up matters on the day by taking the freshman eight-oared race by a length and a half. The official time was: Harvard, 9:38½; Yale, 9:47½. The race was started at 11:31.

Harvard took the lead when they were sent away to a splashing. Both crews soon settled down to a low, steady stroke of thirty to the minute, and Harvard gradually increased her lead so that at the half mile she had an advantage of half a length.

Rougher water was encountered, but the oar work was splendid. The pace slackened, and Yale was able to cut down most of Harvard's lead by the time the mile mark was reached.

HARVARD FRESHIES FIRST.

No change in the positions was observed in the row to the mile and a half point, and both crews were going in splendid form and it was a brilliant race. Harvard's superior form told in the last part of the journey. The Crimson hit it up in the last half mile and from that time on the race was not in doubt. Pulling a beautiful stroke to the end Harvard crossed the finish line a length and a half to the good, amid the cheers of the crowds on the observation trains.

These two races of the morning were but as cocktails to the main repast, which was to come late this afternoon in the shape of the annual eight-oared battle between the varsity crews of the two universities.

That it was to be the greatest race since the sport was first taken up between the two great universities, way back in 1852 on lake Whinipesauke, there was no doubt, for, according to time rows of both crews, the boats this season are by far the fastest that ever started.

The general interest attendant upon the meeting of the watermen of the two greatest universities of the land was spread throughout the entire day. The crowds that fill the long strings of train coaches scattered up into the town for a little while to gather a little local atmosphere and place a few wagers on their favorite crew and then started on their way back to the course.

The race of the varsity eights was due to start from the bridge at 5:30 o'clock. They will row upstream for four miles, finishing about opposite the Harvard crew quarters, and when they have reached that mark it will be decided whether Crimson or Blue is to be the prevailing color for the evening's celebration.

CREW WORKS TOGETHER.

The smoothness of action on the part of the Crimson crew may be laid entirely to the fact that Wray went back to first principles this year, and when he had once picked his varsity crew and a few well-tried substitutes, kept the men boated in that same order and worked over them, until now they row and almost think together.

In their time trials over the course they have demonstrated their ability to hold a high stroke for the greater part of the four miles, and the power which forces the shell through the water, while but little greater than that of many past years, is better pulled.

Harvard usually manages to send out some of the biggest athletes, physically, of any college, but in both the crews and the football teams, where their weight and strength should count for the most, it has usually and inexplicably been misapplied.

SUPERIOR CREW THIS TIME.

There appears to be an exception this year, though, and the men seated in the big varsity boat, while as husky as the usual Harvard crew, averaging 173⅝ pounds in weight and 5 feet 11½ inches in height, seem to have an intangible something that makes them superior to Cambridge crews of the past.

Maybe it's a determination to win, maybe it's only a little better training, but anyway, it's there and seems to promise to stick with them until the finish of the great race.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, June 25.—With one game apiece put away on the shelf, the Senators and the Red Sox brought out their best fighting forces to grapple in the third contest of the series which was scheduled as the gem of the lot as some big twirling machines were billed to work.

The Senators were up against the wall in their lowly place at the foot of the list, playing with the frenzy of a beast at bay, while the Sox were scrapping to give the Senatorial bunch the slip and prevent them from closing in on them.

The biggest danger the home team had to fear was the quick break from the barrier by the Senators, as once in the lead they were the hardest kind of a foe to catch at any distance. With the home team setting the pace there was hardly a chance of the visitors getting abreast before the last post was passed, and Manager McGuire, who was optimistic in his confidence of the team's ability, planned his campaign to baffle the Senators at the start and then put the finishing touches on in the last rounds.

Foxy Cantillon had several good sharpshooters to bring to the front at his command who had some deadly ammunition ready, but McGuire was ready to explode a bomb in their midst and make them bite dust.

There were none better than old "Cy" Young in the Senators' camp, and the ideal playing weather was the kind which the old master thrived on if his arm did not fail him

POLO GROUNDS, New York, June 25.—It was the windup of the double-header days for the Giants and the Doves and both teams were not sorry that the end was in sight. For three days the teams have battled in a brace of contests each afternoon till they were weary from the strain of conflict.

The Giants had all the better of it up to the present double mixup, winning three out of the four games, but the Beaneaters hoped to get something more out of the eighteen innings which were on tap before the sun was obscured.

Both teams will not forget in a hurry the arduous diamond work of these three days which, combined with the extreme heat, was sufficient to put any put the staunchest athletes to the bad.

While the Doves have been snared the most number of times, the local fans are still strong for the old vets wearing the foreign suits who once won big money for the Giants, and no team comes here that gets more consideration than the Bay Staters.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Beaumont was an easy out, Crandall to Tenney. Browne flied to Tenney. McGann singled to left. Bates forced McGann, Bridwell to Doyle. NO RUNS.

Hannifan glued on to Tenney's lefty foul. Doyle lined a hot one to Beaumont. Boultes grabbed Seymour's wicked stab and threw to McGann. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Dahlen smashed to deep left for three sacks. Hannifan dropped a safe one to short left, scoring Dahlen. Ritchey rapped to centre for a single and on Seymour's wild throw to Tenney, Hannifan scored. Graham smashed a one-sacker to right and on Bresnahan's high throw to second Ritchey got home and the batter went to second. Tenney muffed Crandall's throw of Boultes's bunt. Beaumont singled to left, scoring Graham. Doyle dropped Devlin's throw of Browne's bunt and Boultes tallied. Beaumont sneaked home when Doyle threw low to Bresnahan. Crandall was given the hook at this stage and Beecher was substituted. McGann went out, Beecher to Tenney on a sacrifice. Browne scored on the squeeze play worked with Bates who died, Beecher to Tenney. Dahlen singled to centre. Hannifan singled to right. Tenney put out Ritchey unassisted. SEVEN RUNS.

Donlin walked. Devlin singled to right. Shannon flied to Browne. Needham batted for Bresnahan and struck out. Boultes's quick throw to Dahlen caught Donlin dead asleep at the second post. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Graham singled to centre. Boultes sacrificed, Beecher to Tenney. Beaumont singled to right and Graham scored. Brown flied out to Tenney, Beaumont out, Needham to Bridwell. ONE RUN.

Bridwell lined to centre for a sack. Dahlen tossed Beecher's roller to Ritchey forcing out Bridwell. Merkle batted for Tenney. McGann muffed Merkle's puzzling fly. Doyle smashed to left for a single, scoring Beecher. Hannifan dropped McGann's relay from Browe and Merkle was safe at third. Seymour out, Ritchey to McGann, Merkle scorig. Donlin knocked a shiner off Hannifan's feet and Doyle got home.

Devlin walked. Shannon came to the rescue with a clean home run to the right field fence, scoring Donlin and Devli. Needham singled to right. Bridwell out, Ritchey to McGann. SIX RUNS.

HANNAN DROPS 60 MEN TO-DAY

Sixty men in the employ of the Water Department will be dropped from the payroll to-night, in accordance with the recommendations of the Finance Commission. The commission recommended the dismissal of 150 men, but Commissioner Hannan said this afternoon that only sixty would be let out. Simultaneous with the dismissals there will be some promotions and transfers.

LOOK FOR KEY TO $1,000 IN GOLD IN "HIDDEN--NOT LOST"

CLEWS IN $5,000 TREASURE STORY ON PAGE 4.

PERSISTENCE NETS $100 IN TREASURE HUNT

Chelsea Young Man Finds Hidden Gold After Two Days' Search.

TELLS HOW HE DID IT

Treasure Clew That Won $100

They glided slowly by a spot from which cars start and on which a monument to one of America's greatest men stands. A man peered about the entrances to buildings, muttering audibly:

"I am sure it is here—I must have that $100."—From the story, "Hidden—Not Lost."

The happiest young man in Chelsea today is Frank J. C. Lacy. He found the $100 clew in "Hidden—Not Lost," followed it two days persistently and got the money.

Lacy is eighteen years of age and lives with his parents at No. 22 Winnisimmet street, Chelsea. His home is just outside of the fire-swept belt. His story will be illuminating and instructive to half-hearted hunters. With the $100 securely in his pocket young Lacy told this story of his great find:

"I started in with the others on Monday to hunt for the treasure. The first clew I discovered led to the Old Howard Theatre. I didn't get anything there, but learned afterward from the AMERICAN that another reader did.

You never can tell where the treasure is till you land it, but it's well worth losing some dignity for.

How Search Began.

"When the first Key Edition of the AMERICAN appeared on Tuesday I bought a paper and searched the story for clews. The clew that looked good to me indicated the spot where cars start. Several persons were reading the AMERICAN in the street near me looking for clews.

"'I guess that means the North station,' I remarked.

"'Why not try Park square,' one of the crowd suggested.

"'Do cars start from there?' I inquired, as I was not very well acquainted with that part of the city.

"'Yes, Worcester cars,' said the man.

"So I went to Park square and made a search, but found nothing promising. At one time I made an examination of a marble slab containing the names of the occupants in a building. I took a lead pencil and ran it behind the slab. I felt something that rustled. I thought it was dry leaves. I went away. This was Tuesday afternoon.

"I did not give up the hunt, however. Yesterday I got an AMERICAN about noon and read something about the hunters missing a big find. So I went to Park Square again. I made another examination of the marble slab, felt something there, but could not dislodge it. Of course I never felt sure that it was $100 or I would have got it then.

Now After the $1,000.

"When the first Key Edition appeared yesterday I ran through the story hastily. There was the clew again with the additional announcement that a monument to a great American stood at the spot. A great many persons thought this meant Adams square.

"But I was convinced it meant Park square. I made my third visit to Park square. I tried the slab again and after some difficulty the object hidden behind it dropped out.

"I then found that I had had $100 within an inch of my hand twice before and had not then known it.

"I want to say to those who have been faint-hearted in this search that I know that the clews are all O. K. I am going to keep it up and get that $1,000 in gold if possible."

Lacy is a clean-cut, stalwart young fellow. He does not drink or use tobacco. He attended, while younger, the St. Rose School in Chelsea, which was burned. He made a B line from the AMERICAN office for home.

"This money goes to mother," he said.

The Other Winners.

William E. Sheerin of No. 43 Smith street, Roxbury, a boy of fifteen, found the "largest theatre in Boston" yesterday and got $5 which was hidden in the lobby.

"I came into the city to look for work," he said. "I got the AMERICAN and read the clews in yesterday's paper. I knew right off that the Boston is the largest theatre in the city, so I went here. A crowd followed me. I hunted about and found the money behind a radiator."

Another lucky reader of yesterday's instalment of the story is Daniel J. Devlin of No. 43 Endicott avenue, Beachmont. His reading of the story, "Hidden—Not Lost," netted him just $5.

"I work at Bush's, No. 71 Kilby street. I am an office boy. I left the office and bought an AMERICAN. One of the clews mentioned a historical building near the scene of the Boston massacre. I knew at once where that is. I went to the Old State House, and there was a big crowd there. I shook a door and something fell. I grabbed it and ran. It was $5."

The artist who drew this never saw the money man and is sore because he can't join the hunt. The real money man says he doesn't look like this at all.

How to Get First Clews to the Buried Treasure

Promptness in getting the first edition of the BOSTON AMERICAN that contains the daily instalment of "Hidden—Not Lost" may mean good fortune for those who wish to search for the clews and the $5,000 buried treasure.

The story will appear in the edition of the AMERICAN which has a key in the upper right-hand corner, and in all of the editions thereafter. The first of these editions is issued shortly before 4 p. m., and will be on sale practically simultaneously by 4 o'clock at the following points:

South Station.
AMERICAN Office, No. 80 Summer street.
North Station.
Haymarket square.
Corner Boylston and Washington streets.
Park Street Subway Station.
Scollay square.

SLATE MEYER FOR MANAGER OF CAMPAIGN

OYSTER BAY, L. I., June 25.—Following the conference which is to be held here on Saturday between President Roosevelt, Wright and several members of the National Republican Committee, it is expected that the name of the Taft campaign manager will be announced.

From information obtained to-day it looks very much as though the name will be that of Postmaster General George Von L. Meyer. It was said about here that Mr. Meyer had already been selected by the President and approved by the candidate, and that Saturday's proceedings will consist chiefly of a perfunctory ratification of the selection by the committee members.

Mr. Meyer would be chosen, if he is chosen, for several reasons. One, and perhaps the most important—is that he has no entangling alliances with any wing or faction of the party. Everybody likes him and respects him, and he could get to work without enemies to bring up past differences.

Another reason is that he is a capable, efficient manager, organizer and business man. His conduct of the postoffice has met with the Presidential approval and at the same time he is popular with the Federal officeholders, with whose organization he is perfectly familiar.

FAILED BANK DIVIDEND.

NORTH ATTLEBORO, June 25.—A dividend of 25 per cent. will be paid on July 1 to the depositors of the defunct Jewelers' National Bank, according to an announcement made by Receiver Charles S. Bancroft.

The Secret Revealed For Thin Women

Madame Moneaux, deceased beauty specialist, of New York, long possessed the greatest of all secrets pertaining to feminine charm. And what is this great secret, so much desired by women—the secret that has made a vast fortune for the madam's heirs, and that brought her all the famous actresses and society leaders for patrons?

"What, you don't know?"

It is a simple, but sure method of developing the bust, arms and neck of women, who through defect of nutrition and circulation, are humiliated by undeveloped arms, neck and bust. The treatment consists of applying a powerful but harmless nervine stimulant to the cells of the skin, to be absorbed and utilized as nourishment to the flesh cells and tissues. Beautiful changes are wrought. Ugly, deformed women are developed into charming personages, with well-rounded arms and neck and full, normal bust of exquisite curve and proportion, so much admired in our great actresses and society leaders. Any leading druggist will supply the ingredients to mix at home, and as they are used for various prescriptions no one need be the wiser as to what they are to be used for, which is as it should be for modest womanhood. Get separately "two ounces glycerine," "three ounces Rose Water" and "one ounce Tincture Cadomene" and five cents worth of borax. Take home, mix the glycerine with Tincture Cadomene, shake and let stand two hours; then add a teaspoonful of borax and the rosewater. Shake well and apply to the neck, arms and bust, rubbing and massaging until completely absorbed; then wash thoroughly with hot water and soap and dry thoroughly. Apply morning and night regularly for several weeks and the most beautiful development will begin to reward the efforts. It is believed by experts to be the most necessary and effective prescription ever conceived.

This is worth keeping, if not for yourself, for some dear friend who needs it.

CLEVELAND'S OLD FRIENDS TO BE BEARERS

Bereaved Widow Comforted by Condolences from Far and Near.

FUNERAL TO BE PRIVATE

PRINCETON, N. J., June 25.—Mrs. Cleveland this afternoon decided upon six of the pallbearers for the funeral on Friday of her husband, former President Grover Cleveland. There will be added a number of others this evening from among the scores of prominent men who will be at the funeral. Those so far selected are all lifelong friends of the dead ex-President.

They are: Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Company; Commodore E. C. Benedict; John H. Finley, president of the College of the City of New York; Dr. Henry Van Dyck; Professor John Hibben of Princeton University, and Dean Andrew Swift, also of the university.

Following the funeral, which will be as private as possible, the procession will leave the Cleveland home at 5 p. m. and proceed down Bayard lane to Nassau street, to Vanderwent street, to Wiggans street, and then to the cemetery.

Hughes to Attend.

Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York telegraphed to Mrs. Cleveland this afternoon asking to be permitted to attend the funeral. Permission was wired to him and he will be present with some of his staff. It has now been decided that the Mayor and Town Council will meet President Roosevelt, who will arrive at Princeton at 4 p. m. to-morrow. He will leave for Oyster Bay immediately after the ceremonies.

The Mayor this afternoon telegraphed to Governor Fort for permission to order out Company L of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., stationed at Princeton, to do police duty to-morrow. Even with the additional deputies sworn in to-day the Mayor fears there will be insufficient police to handle the great crowd.

Condolences Pour In.

Telegrams continued to pour in to-day. Some of them are:

"Greatly shocked by sad intelligence. I hasten to tender very deep condolence and sincere sympathy for the great bereavement that has befallen you and the country. "BARON TAKAHIRA, "Japanese minister to the United States."

"Mrs. Bryan joins me in sending sympathy and condolence. William Jennings Bryan."

"Please accept deepest sympathy of my race and myself. Mr. Cleveland was one of our best friends. Booker T. Washington."

"Accept my sincere condolence in your great bereavement by the death of my honored friend. Cardinal Gibbons."

"Paris, June 25.—I beg to express to you my most respectful condolence for the misfortune which has come to you. Prince Roland Bonaparte."

Contrary to all precedent, after the death of ex-Presidents, the body of Grover Cleveland will not lie in state. This was the decision of Mrs. Cleveland.

She has told the intimate friends now with her at the Cleveland home here that she could not bear a funeral that would be a great public function, and, while she appreciates deeply the sorrow that Mr. Cleveland's death has caused among public men throughout the country, she wishes only a private funeral.

Mrs. Cleveland made a special request of Mayor Robertson of Princeton to-day that there would be no formal or official reception.

Death Mask Taken.

The death mask of Mr. Cleveland was taken to-day by Professor Wilson of Princeton, presented to the university by Laurence Hutton.

The body of the ex-president as prepared for burial to-day by John A. Stead of Princeton. According to Mr. Stead Mr. Cleveland weighed less than 150 pounds, and it is said that the excessive heat of the past week, which materially hastened his end, caused him to lose flesh greatly. His normal weight was in excess of 240 pounds.

According to friends of the Cleveland family Mr. Cleveland died virtually a poor man. It was generally believed that he had managed to save a considerable fortune, but it appears that he has left his family little more than the house at Princeton and another at Buzzard's Bay.

As the head of the association of life insurance presidents he received $25,000 a year, but he served only during the past twelve months.

It has been decided that only two of the Cleveland children will attend the funeral. Esther and Richard are on the way some time to-day. Marion and Francis will remain with their grandmother, Mrs. Perrine, at Tamworth.

ACCUSED OF THEFT IN LODGING HOUSE

William Whitman of Everett was in the South Boston Court to-day on a charge of larceny preferred by Nora Barrett, who keeps a lodging house at No. 66 A street. He was accused of taking jewelry and valuables, the property of lodgers in the place. Judge Fallon gave him three months in the House of Correction, but he appealed and went to jail because he could not furnish $300 bail.

1000 DOZEN Men's 1.00 and 1.25 NEGLIGEE SHIRTS at 69c

Less Than Cost of Manufacture

Some months ago we gave to our many patrons just such an opportunity to secure for themselves $1.00 and $1.25 Negligee Shirts at an extremely low price. There was such a widespread demand for these shirts that we have now secured another lot of equally attractive value, and in many respects choicer and better—offering the celebrated Renfrew Madras Cloth in a range of blue shades. Made coat style, finely tailored, with attached cuffs and pearl buttons.

69c These Shirts are actually worth $1.00 and $1.25 each. Sale price . . . . . 69c

Amoskeag Chambray Shirts

Of the celebrated Amoskeag Chambray, with detached cuffs, all sizes, 14 to 17. The coolest and best wearing shirt on the market. Never sold for less than $1.00. Your choice of this lot 49c

5000 Dozen Men's Collars

4-Ply, all latest styles—all sizes. Regular 15c collars—this sale.

6-in-a-box for 50c

This is the first time a regular 15c 4-ply collar, put up 6 in a box, has ever been sold in Boston at this remarkably low price.

In fact, this price barely covers actual cost of the materials alone.

Only because we purchased the entire surplus stock of a famous Troy manufacturer can we make this extraordinary offer.

All styles, including the popular high and medium double band collars, as well as the styles for older men, including the wanted low collar for hot weather.

All are clean and new, packed a half dozen in a neat box, and sold to you in the original package, fresh from the laundry. While they last—

CLUB WOMEN AT WAR OVER HOME CRAFTS

President Demands Abolition of National Household Economics Board.

SOME OPPOSITION APPEARS

It developed to-day that one more big fight is to come before the delegates to the convention of the National Federation of Women's Clubs before the gavel falls for the close. This fight will be over the recommendation of the president, Mrs. Sarah S. Platt Decker, that the Committee on Household Economics, as a committee of the general body, be abolished.

To this recommendation many of the delegates take exception, and the members of that committee are to hold a conference in Whitney Hall at 3 o'clock Saturday.

Mrs. E. J. Bates, chairman of the Household Economics Committee of the Massachusetts branch, is opposed to the suggestion of the president, and will lead the opposition to the adoption of the recommendation of Mrs. Decker. Mrs. Bates claims that the adoption of the suggestion would hamper the work of the Household Economics Committees of the various States.

Would Work by States.

The president's recommendation does not mean that the work of household economics by the various state branches be dropped, but that each State look after that feature without direction from the general body.

This, Mrs. Bates says, would hamper the work of the state branches, inasmuch as there would not be any general supervision of the work.

"Pure Food" was the topic of discussion at to-day's session of the convention. The 1,700 delegates and alternates debated the various phases of the subject in Symphony Hall this forenoon, while the thousands of visitors from all parts of the world began another day of sightseeing.

At the forenoon session of the convention, after the hearing on several committee reports and the transaction of much routine business, the pure food agitation was taken up and discussed by experts and the delegates themselves. Dr. Charles Harrington, of the Massachusetts State Board of Health, spoke on "Local Meat Inspection."

Mrs. Mary Hinman Abel of Baltimore delivered an address on "Clean Food," and Mrs. Ellen H. Richards of Boston spoke on "Sanitation in Daily Life." Mrs. Walter McNab Miller of Columbia, Mo., chairman of the pure food committee, submitted a report. Other addresses were delivered, one by Miss Helen Varick Boswell of New York, on "Conditions in the Canal Zone;" by Mrs. W. W. Penfield of New York, on "Methods and Factors in Civic Work;" by Miss Sadie American of Washington, on "Play and Playgrounds," and by C. Howard Walker of Boston on "Municipal Art."

Reception at State House.

There was no session this afternoon, as Governor and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., received the delegates and other visitors at the State House.

The literature session last evening resulted in the bringing into prominence a hitherto almost unknown American poet, Mrs. Olive Tilford Dargen of South Carolina, who read a poem penned for the occasion, "An Ode to Woman." Mrs. Dargen was hailed by Thomas Nelson Page as a "real American poet."

Outside the convention the chief feature of yesterday was the trolley ride to Concord and Lexington. About 1,000 clubwomen boarded special cars at noon and were taken to Concord, where they were received by the Women's Club of that town.

The Concord women had a large number of automobiles and carriages in which the visitors were taken to the many historic spots in Concord and Lexington and to the Kitson and French statues. Lemonade and dainty lunches were served at different places.

WITH COAT AS SHIELD, DASHES THROUGH FIRE

Surrounded by rolls of burning wall paper and with the room filled with black smoke, Aaron Fullerton, 18 years old, employed as a clerk by Wall & Brackett, dealers in wall papers, had a narrow escape from suffocation, when fire broke out in their storeroom, on the top floor at No. 34 Cornhill, to-day.

Fullerton had gone to the storeroom for some samples. When about to return he saw the stairway a wall of flame. He tried to escape by means of a ladder leading to the roof, but the smoke was so dense that he had to give up the attempt. Jumping to the floor, and with his coat wrapped tightly about his head, he dashed through the flames to the stairway and staggered down stairs to the street, where he met Mr. Wall.

When the department arrived the room was a mass of flame, and smoke was coming in clouds from the windows. The cause of the fire is unknown and the damage will reach $500.

"Better be safe than sorry" and the best way is to stick to the Bitters. If you experiment you only waste time and money. Start to-day.

The Bitters has been the great American home remedy for 55 years and it has clearly proven its merit in cases of Poor Appetite, Flatulency, Insomnia, Indigestion, Costiveness and Malaria.

3 CAMBRIDGE NEWSBOYS TO-DAY'S PRIZE WINNERS

From left to rght they are: Samuel Baron, aged fifteen of No. 1017 Cambridge street, Cambridge, who sells Americans at the Brookline street transfer station; Ben Stainberg, aged fourteen, of No. 224 Webster avenue, Cambridge, and George Cooper, aged fifteen, of No. 140 Hampshire street, Cambridge.

The camara man took a trip over to Cambridge yesterday, and as a result three bright Cambridge newsboys take the AMERICAN'S prizes to-day. The snapshot man found as lively a bunch of newsies in the University City as he has yet run across in his daily search for hustlers. Around the Brookline street transfer station, where nearly all Cambridge-bound passengers on the trolleys pass, he snapped the three busiest newsies, and the AMERICAN to-day prints their pictures. They are small merchants, but they are showing big results and each is deserving of the prize. Each one did a great business yesterday, for the AMERICAN extras, telling of ex-President Grover Cleveland's death, were in big demand.

Sammie Baron, the prize winner, whose picture is at the left of the group, is a wideawake boy who is always eager to push the AMERICAN. The camera man spotted him almost as soon as he reached the transfer station. He caught Bennie Stainberg doing a land office business and sized him up as a prize winner at first glance. Little George Cooper was carrying a rapidly disappearing bundle of AMERICANS when the Camera man picked him out as the third prize winner. The camera man will continue his hunt today.

5 DEAD, MANY HURT IN CHEMICAL EXPLOSION

CHICAGO, June 25.—Five persons were killed in an explosion which wrecked the plant of the Pabst Chemical Company, Nos. 176 and 178 Huron street, this forenoon.

Two men were fatally injured and twelve women, at work on the first floor, were more or less seriously burned.

The bodies of Mrs. Jane Nolan, Mamie Nolan, Emmet Nolan, Jennie Nolan and an unidentified man have been taken from the ruins.

The entire structure was wrecked by the explosion. A sheet of flame followed. Employes of the company were trapped at their work in the basement and on the first and second floors. The third and fourth floors were occupied as living apartments. The Nolan family lived on the third floor.

GIRLS LEAPED TO STREET.

The twelve women at work on the first floor were thrown from their feet by the explosion and their clothing took fire before they could rise.

The girls rushed to a window and leaped to the street.

One man jumped from a second story window. He is dying at the Polyclinic Hospital.

John McDonald, a fireman, was fatally scalded when engine No. 1 was overturned. Joseph May, three years old, of No. 184 Huron street, was dangerously cut by glass as he was playing in the street.

A number of women were trapped on the roof of the building. Firemen carried them down a ladder to the roof of a building on the east. They were attended in a neighboring manufacturing plant by police ambulance physicians.

FOUGHT TO REACH ROOF.

The explosion occurred in the basement and practically demolished the building. The fire spread so rapidly that the employes of the chemical company were on fire before they had recovered from the shock of the concussion.

The exits to the street were cut off. The men and women fought and struggled to reach the roof. Helen and Lizzie Boss leaped from a second-story window. The fire followed the explosion so quickly that they were trapped in a sheet of flame.

"We ran to a window. It had not been broken by the explosion, but we smashed it. Both of us leaped to the street, a story below. As soon as we could recover our feet we beat each other to put out the fire. Our waists were entirely burned off us," said Helen Boss.

THE father of "Toodles," the little Fall River girl who sought her "papa" through the columns of the SUNDAY AMERICAN, is urgently requested to call at this office.

There is a letter waiting here for him, and the little girl and her mother are eager to see him and sorrowing because no word has come in answer to their appeal.

NEWS OF LABOR.

A report is expected to be made tomorrow night at the regular meeting of Cigarmakers' No. 97, by President Touvin, who went to Chicago to urge favorable action by the international union on an appeal of Local No. 97 in regard to the strike in connection with the Cigar Factory Tobacco Strippers' Union.

LABOR NOTES.

Electrical Workers, No. 104, last night elected the following officers: President, James Guilfoyle; vice-president, Joseph A. Enos; recording secretary, Alexander Campbell; first inspector, A. Gillivray; second inspector, J. W. Maertons; foreman, James Tanner; trustee, Joseph Bonner; delegate to New England District Council, Daniel McDonald; business agent, Ernest B. Connors; press secretary, Ernest B. Connors; executive board, Alexander Campbell, Joseph A. Enos, James Guilfoyle, R. J. McIntyre and William McDonald; delegate to the Faneuil Hall protest meeting, Michael Birmingham. Delegates were also elected to the Boston and Cambridge Central Labor Unions.

North Station Branch of the Order of Railroad Station Men last night held a meeting and banquet at No. 164 Canal street. The proposition to amalgamate with the Brotherhood of Railroad Freight and Baggagemen was voted down.

Machinists No. 264 will elect a business agent tonight. Vacancies on the executive board will also be filled.

Upholsterers, No. 53, will hold a special meeting to-night at No. 30 Hanover street.

The scale committee of Coal Teamsters, No. 68, held another meeting with the dealers to-day. It is expected that a final agreement will be reached before the next meeting.

President James H. Sheehan and Daniel Gardner were elected delegates to the International Convention of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers, to be held in September at Indianapolis, by Boston Plumbers, No. 12. Agent Thomas L. Pratt was elected to represent the union at the protest meeting to be held in Faneuil Hall Tuesday, June 30, under the auspices of the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor. A committee will be appointed to arrange for an outing on Labor Day. International Organizer Frank J. Kennedy of Chicago announces that he has organized a new local in Gloucester, which includes every man within its jurisdiction.

DISAGREEMENT IN THE DOHERTY COERCION CASE

Lowell Health Chairman Freed on the Bribery Charge in Cambridge Court.

TRIAL LASTED FOUR DAYS

A disagreement on the charge of political coercion was reported by the jury in the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court at East Cambridge to-day in the case of William C. Doherty, chairman of the Lowell Board of Health. As directed yesterday by Judge John A. Aiken, a verdict of no cause of action was returned on the charge of bribery.

Doherty, wearing a new and neatly fitting blue serge suit, and smiling, with a large number of Lowell politicians, was in court when the verdicts were read. The bribery case had been considered by the jury from 3 o'clock ysterday afternoon until 10 o'clock last night, when a special report was handed up.

A number of Doherty's friends congratulated him as he walked out of the court room. His trial lasted four days.

Clews to Its Whereabouts and Clews to Other Hidden Gold and Treasure Revealed in This Story.

By "The Money Man."

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Walter Sinclair, a young Cleveland business man, stopping at Hotel Somerset, Boston, was surprised by a knock at the door of his room, No. 444. When he opened the door a maid handed him a card which bore an elaborate coat of arms, a Latin inscription, and these letters traced in ink in a feminine hand: "V. R. de M."

The maid explained that Madame wanted to see him at once in Room 487. In vain Sinclair protested that there must be some mistake, but the maid persisted, and Sinclair went to the room indicated, and was told to enter in a sweet, feminine voice.

The speaker was Madame Alvarez, very beautiful, who was amazed when she learned that Sinclair was not an emissary from a De Lesseps. Sinclair finally promised to help her win in a great game in which she was engaged.

They finally went to a hotel to dine. When Sinclair, who had entered to see if a dark, military man was inside, returned to the street, he found the woman had vanished. Sinclair was dumfounded and regretted that he had been led into the strange series of adventures.

Sauntering about, he met a mysterious woman in black, who seemed to know him, but whom he had never seen before. The woman thought the Cleveland man was from De Lesseps. When she learned he was not she hurried away. Sinclair returned to the hotel and found Madame Alvarez in the dining room. She motioned him to take a seat at the same table, which he did.

In the talk that followed Madame Alvarez asked Sinclair if he wished to be released from the promise he had made to help her. He said he would stick to her. After dining, the two got into their red automobile and drove about the city. They found themselves chased by a green car in which were three men and a bareheaded woman. The woman half stood and urged the chauffeur on, apparently.

CHAPTER VI.

ALTHOUGH Sinclair had for years been an enthusiastic motorist he had never been one of the speed-mad variety. He preferred leisurely runs along quiet country roads where he could fill his lungs with ozone and forget the worries of business, to insane dashes in the attempt to break records and at the risk of breaking limbs.

To-night, however, he forgot all thought of danger, and it was well, for never did an automobile traverse Boston at higher speed than the car Frank Dalton was so skillfully piloting. With a driver less expert disaster must have been inevitable at every other turn.

"Never mind where you go," shouted Madame Alvarez, "so long as you lose that car."

Dalton, obedient to the command of the woman for whose courage he was already full of admiration, guided the car over the most tortuous course, taking at full speed the sharpest turns, in the hope that the pursuers would not dare attempt them. Still the green car hung in their wake, its powerful lamps gleaming brightly a scant two blocks behind.

For a half-hour they neither gained nor lost. Then something went wrong with the engine. In spite of Dalton's frantic efforts with the levers their speed slackened perceptibly. Nearer and nearer came the green car over a pathway as bright as day.

They were near the spot where Sinclair had met Madame Alvarez with the car that evening when the engine gave a dual gasp and they came to a dead stop. The woman's sigh of despair died on her lips, for the following car, instead of slowing down, went roaring straight by them so close that the wheels almost touched. As it passed the woman in the rear seat stood up and shouted something at them in a tongue that was unintelligible to Sinclair.

Both he and Dalton looked at their companion in surprise at this unexpected end of the chase. In one hand she held her revolver, which she had taken out the instant she heard the engine go wrong. In spite of the cool Spring wind her face was deadly pale, but it wore a smile of triumph which relieved the anxiety of the two men.

A Clever Ruse

"They have deceived themselves by their own cleverness," she cried. "They are on their way to the place marked by the tall elms where I went after leaving the Somerset to-night, but they will find nothing there to reward them for their long trip."

She jumped to her feet and with outstretched arm pointed to the tail lights of the green car which were fading away in the direction from which she had come running that same evening with a car in close pursuit.

"Well, madame, you seem to be a winner again," said Sinclair. There was a tinge of sarcasm in his voice, for now that the excitement of the race was over his heart once more grew bitter at the thought that he was being made a fool of—and by a woman whom he admired and whom he had given his word of honor to faithfully serve. Yet he said nothing about the pocketbook which he felt sure Madame Alvarez had stolen. There was nothing to be lost by delaying and he wished to make the accusation when Dalton was not within hearing.

"And what, may I ask, is the next thing to be done?" he asked.

She looked at him as if she had noted the change in his manner, and his eyes dropped beneath her piercing gaze. "If ever there was a woman whose looks indicated honesty it is she," thought Sinclair, "and yet I know her to be a pickpocket, and probably worse."

"If you are not already too tired," she said, quietly, "we will go to the place for which we set out in the beginning."

Sinclair said nothing, and Dalton, who by this time had the engine in running order again, started the car slowly down the street. During the entire run through a section of the city which at that hour was as quiet as the grave, not one of the party spoke. Sinclair was busy with thoughts of this woman's falsity, which filled him with gloom and remorse. Dalton was vainly trying to guess the identity of the chauffeur who had come so near robbing him of his laurels, even when his engine was in order. Madame Alvarez was fumbling with the fastenings of a package wrapped in what looked like waterproof cloth, which she had removed from the folds of her mantle.

The car was running slowly along a fashionable street when to the ears of Madame Alvarez came these words from some one whom she could not see:

"It is near a statue of a man on horseback. Let us look there."

What did this mysterious reference mean?

"Are we almost there?" asked Madame Alvarez at length. "I am such a stranger in Boston that I cannot tell."

"Only four blocks more," replied Dalton, touching his cap respectfully.

"Then stop at the next corner, please," she commanded, "and wait there until we return."

At the corner Sinclair helped her to alight and she motioned him to follow her as, with the majestic tread of a queen, she walked down the street.

The setting moon was flooding the world with a ghostly radiance, and all was silence except for the sound of their own footsteps and the lapping of the water against the sea wall below. It was such a night as June brings only in New England.

Courage Fails

Sinclair was in no mood to appreciate the beauties of the scene that was spread before his eyes. His mind was full of remorse for what he had already done and gloomy forebodings of what was yet to come. His early doubts had crystallized into strong belief and at the slightest sign of danger to himself he was ready to shout for the police and help put his companion into the cell where, he believed, she belonged.

Twice he cleared his throat to accuse her flatly of the theft of his pocketbook, but each time his courage failed him. He would wait until he heard what she had to say, although whatever she might say would not change one whit his opinion of her. Besides he had given her his word of honor. He would not go back on that, even when it was given to a proven criminal. He would see her through this adventure, as he had promised.

Madame Alvarez carried in her hands the black wrapped package which he had seen in her lap in the car. He offered to carry it for her, but she refused. He wondered whether it contained stolen property. He was also puzzled to know where she had obtained it. It must have been during his absence after seeing the detective outside the hotel, for he could have taken oath that she had had nothing of the kind earlier in the night. It was too large and too heavy for her to have carried far beneath the folds of her cloak.

"Forgive! Forgive!" he cried piteously, in a voice that was shaken "I did not know or I would not have come."

Rounding a corner which shut the waiting Dalton and his car from view, Madame Alvarez looked carefully in every direction. Satisfying herself that they were not watched, she took Sinclair gently by the arm and drew him into the shadow of an arched gateway.

Unwrapping the package she carried she revealed a rosewood box of the most exquisite workmanship. Its corners were protected by mounds of burnished gold. On the cover was an elaborate design of the same metal in which sparkled several precious stones. The box alone, unless Sinclair's eyes deceived him, was worth a hard night's work even by a burglar who scorned anything less than a millionaire's mansion.

She handed him the wrapper to hold while she took from her bosom a small golden key which was attached to a long chain around her neck. Sinclair noted with interest that the wrapper was lined with silk, and that outside this were alternate layers of what appeared to be rubber and asbestos, thus making it practically impervious to wet, cold and heat.

With hands that trembled slightly she unlocked the box. As she did so she kept the uplifted cover turned toward Sinclair so that he could not catch a glimpse of its contents.

"Who Are You?"

Holding the box in one hand she fumbled inside with the other. Finally she drew forth a packet wrapped in material of the same sort that had enclosed the box. It was about six inches long and perhaps half as wide. She handed it to Sinclair to hold. He noticed that one end was heavier than the other. With a deliberation which was aggravating to his impatience, she then closed and locked the box, carefully replaced the wrapper and tied it with a long cord which wound about it several times.

She turned to Sinclair and was about to speak when a low whistle made them both start with surprise. Looking around they saw creeping stealthily toward them in the fading moonlight a short, roughly dressed man. His broad brimmed hat was pulled low over his eyes and his long overcoat buttoned high around his chin as if to conceal his face. In his right hand there was the gleam of polished metal, either a stiletto or a revolver, Sinclair thought.

"Give me your revolver," whispered Sinclair.

"Unfortunately I cannot for I left it in the car. But it does not matter. I think I know this man and that he will do no harm. Do you, however, guard this box and the packet I just gave you as you would your life. They are worth more than my own life and you will not lose by guarding them."

The approaching man had now reached the middle of the street. With revolver upraised he was advancing toward them slowly, as if he feared an attack from some other direction.

To Sinclair's amazement Madame Alvarez walked straight to meet this man of menace. When she reached the curb she stopped, threw back the mantle and, upturning her lovely face so that the moon shone full upon it, stretched out her arms at either side in the attitude of a martyr awaiting death.

"Who are you" she said in a voice that betrayed not the slightest tremor.

The man was not a dozen steps away and Sinclair stood as if paralyzed, expecting every second to see Madame Alvarez fall with a bullet through her heart. Closer and closer crept the man. When he was so near that he could have touched her skirt he gave a low cry of surprise and fear.

He dropped the revolver to the pavement with a clatter that echoed and re-echoed up and down the silent street. Then he sank to his knees at the woman's feet and raised his hands in supplication.

"Forgive! Forgive!" he cried piteously in a voice that was shaken. "I did not know or I would not have come."

"I understand. Now go!" said the woman, in a voice so low that Sinclair barely caught the words.

The man raised the hem of her dress to his lips and kissed it passionately again and again. Then he arose to his feet and without another word, and without stopping to pick up his revolver, he ran down the street, closely followed by another man who stepped from behind a tree a few yards away.

More clews in to-morrow's instalment of the great mystery story. If the reader failed to get any of the treasure to-day, be on the alert for to-morrow's paper issued shortly before 4 o'clock.

BIG GAINS FOR LEAGUE SHOWN IN ENROLLMENT

Members of Both Old Parties Renounce Allegiance to Become Independents.

DEMOCRATIC LOSS HEAVY

Republican net gain	132
Independence League net gain	98
Democratic loss	230

The figures given out to-day by the Board of Election Commissioners show that since September 5, when registration for the city primaries ended, 65 Democrats and 37 Republicans have changed their enrollment to the Independence League designation, making a total of 102 who have left the old parties and joined the independent ranks up to June 25.

The Republicans have gained 132 net, the Independence League 98, and the Democrats have lost 230.

The time for changing of enrollment for the State primaries expired last night.

Three hundred and five voters shifted their party allegiance. Of these, 182 Boston Democrats went over to the Republican camp.

The Democratic party gained practically no recruits, only seventeen Republicans renouncing their allegiance. None of those enrolled in the League shifted to the Democratic party, and four went to the Republican ranks. These are the figures for changes in registration from September 5, 1907, to June 25, 1908.

Democratic to Inedpendence League	65
Republican to Independence League	37
Democratic to Republican	182
Republican to Democratic	17
Independence League to Republican	4
Total to June 25, 1908	305

The Democrats who changed to the Independence League were: Partick McConnell, 241 Fourth street, Ward 15; John F. O'Connor, 2 Highland terrace, Ward 19; Marlon W. Addison, 45 North Anderson street, Ward 11; George E. Chapman, 62 Ballou avenue, Ward 24; Ernest J. Larkin, 20 Highland street, Ward 21; James Keegan, 21 Huckins street, Ward 17; Thomas F. Slattery, 20 Oak street, Ward 7; James Fogarty, 21 Dorchester street, Ward 14; Richard H. Cummings, 7 Pacific street, Ward 15; Jacob White, 13 Webster street, Ward 2; Hugh A. Kelley, 9 Monument square, Ward 3; Michael Bellusci, 346 North street, Ward 6; Joseph Ventura, Jr., 1 Foster street, Ward 6.

The Republicans who enrolled as Independence Leaguers were: Horace Ellison, 5 May place, Ward 7; Mark Lemon, 8 Fairbury street, Ward 21; Irving A. Burgess, 200 Lamartine street, Ward 14.

MORAN'S FORCE CLEANS UP ITS TRIAL LISTS

The Superior Criminal Court to-day inaugurated its Summer schedule of one session a day. During the Summer months the court will handle only jail cases. The trials of those who are on bail will go over until the Fall.

For the first time in the history of the District Attorney's office there are on the list for trial less than seventy cases. When the new year came in over four hundred cases were carried over from last year. Of the seventy cases some had to be postponed because of the absence of important witnesses, while other cases have been continued until Fall because the defendants are on bail.

Isaac Isaacs, assistant district attorney, will get a rest next month. Assistant District Attorney Felix W. McGettrick will have his vacation in August. Acting District Attorney M. J. Dwyer will spend the Summer in the Finance Commission cases and also the case against Cardenio F. King. He will take his vacation in the Fall.

HANNAN DROPS 60 MEN TO-DAY

Sixty men in the employ of the Water Department will be dropped from the payroll to-night, in accordance with the recommendations of the Finance Commission. The commission recommended the dismissal of 150 men, but Commissioner Hannan said this afternoon that only sixty would be let out. Simultaneous with the dismissals there will be some promotions and transfers.

BOSTON BOUND LINER AGROUND

NEW YORK, June 25.—Losing her course in a thick sea fog, the Clyde line steamer Chippewa, en route from Charleston, S. C., to Boston, ran on a submerged rock on the Long Island coast, just west of Montauk Point.

The Chippewa is a freighter and carried no passengers. The sea rushed into the hole in the steamer's hull, extinguishing the fires and rendering the Chippewa helpless. She has a cargo of naval stores and lumber.

Without steam the alarm whistle could not be sounded and it was not until the fog lifted that the steamer's officers could signal their predicament.

LIFE OF TAFT NOW ON SALE

"William Howard Taft, American," by Robert Lee Dunn and published by the Chapple Publishing Company, Ltd., of Boston, is just out. It is an interesting publication illustrated, and descriptive of the life of the Republican candidate for President.

The author characterizes Taft as "the busiest, hardest working, most effective Secretary of War the United States Government ever had."

The Summer Child

The Usual Vacation Makes It a Travesty of Childhood

By DOROTHY DIX

THIS is the time of the year when city women all over the land are beginning to plan for their Summer outings.

This is as it should be. It is a good thing for everybody to have the mental and physical tonic of change. It is good to breathe different air, see different people, eat different food and fill the day with occupations different from those to which we have been accustomed.

The annual vacation is a life prolonger, a nerve restorer and a temper soother to all, but to none is it so necessary as to women whose lives are, for the most part, monotonous, who do every day the same round of domestic duties, and who are especially benefited by getting out of their narrow grooves.

If a woman has no children, the selection of a place in which to pass her Summer holidays concerns only herself, and is to be decided merely by her preference. Let her go to the seashore or to the mountains, as she pleases, to any big Summer hotel that her purse and her wardrobe permit.

Stop the Sacrifice

The woman who has children, however, has given hostages to fortune, and is no longer free to consult her own inclinations. In choosing a place to spend the Summer she should consider her children's welfare, and not her own amusement; and I want here to make a plea in behalf of the little innocents who are yearly offered up as a sacrifice before the Moloch of the fashionable Summer resort.

The illustrated papers and magazines are flooded just now with humorous pictures of the gay Summer Girl and the giddy Summer Widower. I call your attention to the third picture in that gallery of Summer portraits—The Summer Child.

Look at this little girl. She is overdressed to the point of absurdity. Her spindling little legs are half naked, half covered in fine silk socks. Her thin little body is weighted down with masses of crisp white muslin and embroidery and laces. Her weazened little face looks out from a shock of beribboned hair.

She can't run, because she would get her fine shoes scratched and dusty.

She can't play because she would muss up her expensive frock.

She yanks around a Teddy bear that cost ten dollars, because it's fashionable for little girls to do so; but it's just as much a stage property, and her playing with it is just as much of a pose, as the artificial daisies that the ingenue on the stage picks up on the brink of a canvas stream.

Makes Them Snobs

Not that the Summer Child desires to indulge in childish sports. Oh, dear, no! She is only five or six years old by the clock, but in reality she is ages beyond that kind of thing.

She is already a sage in worldly wisdom. She can already appraise people by their clothes and tell real lace from imitation, and hand embroidery from machine. She is a fully developed snob, who declines to play with children that she thinks less well off than herself, and is perfectly willing to take a back seat when there are any little millionaires around.

Besides, she doesn't want to play. What she likes is to hang around the groups of scandal-mongering women who are rocking in chairs on the piazza, and telling stories that blast and shrivel up a child's innocence as a simoon does a lily over which it blows.

But the Summer Child listens greedily, drinking in every word. She hears gossip that she should never hear, scandal that she should never hear, and listens to stories that besmirch her very soul.

The little boy at the Summer resort fares even worse. He, too, must be kept dressed up. He, too, is deprived of all the exercise and sport that would build up his weak, city-bred little body. He, too, like his sister, must find amusement, and he gets it hanging around the poolroom and the cafe, listening and watching men drink, and swear, and gamble.

Moral Contagion

If a mother takes her children into the environment of the Summer hotel it is as impossible for them to escape its contagion as it would be for them to escape malaria if she took them to sleep in the deadly miasmas of a swamp.

She cannot watch them all the time herself, and, truth to tell, most mothers at Summer resorts do not appear to try to watch their children at all. They dress the little folks up, and turn them loose, and so long as Johnnie or Susan does not give any trouble, mamma seems content to let them follow their own sweet will.

Taking a nurse along does not improve matters, for a hireling cannot be expected to take a deeper interest in children than the mother does, and while the mistress is off gossiping with the balance of the rocking-chair brigade, or indulging in a mild flirtation with a fascinating stranger, the maid may be counted upon to be similarly occupied with her cronies.

It is a bad thing for a child to live in a hotel at all. It is almost a crime to take a child to a Summer hotel, where all the bars are down and social liberty is turned into social license. From such a place a child goes away demoralized, physically and morally. Its little stomach has a dyspepsia from indigestible food, and its little morals a dyspepsia of indigestible ideals.

Their Birthright

On the other hand, every child has an inalienable right to its birthright of dirt and care-freeness, and to know something of the world as God made it.

Therefore, I beseech every mother who reads these lines to deny herself the pleasure of the gay Summer resort and take her children and go off somewhere in the real country this Summer.

Somewhere where the children can wear stout plain clothing, that will not suffer from briars and brambles and mud pies, and where the question of dress does not enter.

Somewhere where the children can find a gentle old horse to ride, and a swimming hole to swim in, and plain food to eat, and where tired little bodies will be glad to sink to sleep at dusk, lulled by the song of the cricket and the call of the whip-poor-will, instead of being excited by the bray of a band and the clink of champagne glasses.

Herod was not more cruel when he took the lives of little children than we are when we slay their childhood and make them men and women before their time.

The only place where we can make restitution to our children of the precious heritage is in the country; and so again I beg of mothers not to turn their little ones into that piteous travesty of childhood, the Summer Child, but to make them real children by giving them a Summer in the country, back on the breast of the all-mother—nature.

Sayings of a Cynic

A man seldom realizes what it is to be disappointed in love until after he is led to the altar by the woman of his choice. slowly would gladly run for office.

Some men try to dodge the issue when they find what they are looking for.

It's so much easier to pray for forgiveness than to fight against temptation.

More men would acquire that tired feeling if all their words were backed by deeds.

Many a man who imagines he is world-famous is unknown to the people in the next block.

A woman doesn't care how much money her husband earns; it is what she gets that interests her.

Bluebeard's wives are not the only women who have lost their heads on account of an unworthy man.

A girl may threaten to scream if a man attempts to kiss her, but she seldom does it if there is a chance of any one's hearing her.

How to Make Milk Safe for Children

SCIENTIFIC investigations have proved that milk in a raw state should never be given to children. Those who cannot buy pasteurized milk should pasteurize it at home. This can be done by observing these simple directions:

1—Bring the milk slowly to a boil, and when it reaches the boiling point bottle it instantly, cork tightly and cool it.

2—Never feed milk that is more than twenty-four hours old to an infant.

3—Keep the milk near ice, and never leave a milk bottle uncorked.

4—Cleanse and scald all bottles before refilling.

Careful observance of these directions will insure against babies contracting disease from impure milk.

Expert Advice on Beauty

By the Professor

DOES NOT PAY

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Can scars be removed from the face? Is the peeling process used by beauty doctors beneficial if used right? I mean scars by smallpox pitting or other poisoning. The scars are not deep, but there are a lot of them and much scarred tissue. In your column you have often advised two remedies to remove scars; one, the lanoline and mercury remedy; the other, bathing scars in hot olive oil. Will either of these last two completely cause the scars to disappear?

INTERESTED READER.

USE the lanoline and mercury salve for the pittings. With time and patience this should cause them to disappear. The peeling process freshens the surface for a little while, but it is more susceptible to blemishes thereafter and will quickly get into the same condition again, so the peeling process does not pay for the expense or the pain.

SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please tell me how to make brown hair stain from sage? My hair is getting so streaked with gray that I want to darken it. HELEN.

MAKE a strong tea of the dried leaves, strain it carefully through muslin and add to each pint two teaspoonfuls of alcohol. Rub on the hair every night, and it should darken the gray hairs sufficiently to keep them from being conspicuous.

WHO CAN ANSWER THIS?

ECONOMY EDITOR:

I have heard of putting up strawberries, blueberries, currants, green corn, etc., uncorked and in the natural state. If some housekeeper has ever tried it and has made a success I wish she would give me the method, as I would like to try it this year.

THE TALE OF A BETTY AND HER BEAUX

By NELL BRINKLEY

He had lean shoulders, and lean hands, and lean legs; a lean jaw and a lean nose. And mostly he didn't smile.

She had laid her hair smoothly away from her face, down over her ears, and had wound it close in gilded braids.

CHAPTER III.

The Lean, Poetic Billy

BETTINA BLUE COLLAR slipped her white forefinger between the ivory leaves of a scarlet-bound, gilt-lettered book and looked upon the man across the library table with grinning eyes and a wickedly sober mouth.

The man across the table was a funny one. You would know he was a "po-le" and read till 2 o'clock in the spectral morning, propped up on the pillows slantwise, in a grass green dressing gown, under the weight of tottering books on the bed.

He had lean shoulders and lean hands and lean legs and a lean jaw and a lean nose. He had grand, glaring pince-nez gripping his nose into a Greek one at his brows, and rimmed with black.

His hair grew far back, away from his temples, the shrinking of it away from his forehead making it into a shining silver beach when the tide falls away.

He had near-sighted gray eyes that made him put out his face close to Bettina's when he talked to her. And he had a warm child's smile—but mostly he didn't smile.

The mark that God put, with a laugh under his breath, between the trim brows of Bettina, went deeper than that—to the hands and head and heart of her, and made her to unconsciously make herself into a prim Princess that night—a sober ideal Lady who would go straight to the heart of a bibliomaniac.

Like a Lady of Olden Days

She laid her hair smoothly away from her face down over her ears, and wound it in gilded braids, close around her head so that it looked as if she was capped with gold, like the Ladies—the stately Ladies of tales that tell of the olden days.

She put on her plainest, straightest frock, with its short waist and its points of lace at the throat and satin wrists, lace pointed like starfish and patterned like elder-flower blossoms.

The long, lean Billy held forth on books and the folks who made them—on the wonder and wisdom of them. He slipped the pages of a little green book over, one after another, with a caressing and lingering of finger tips. He looked at Bettina through the flare of the lamp on his glasses, with an eager little smile wavering uncertainly around his mouth.

"You never get tired of—of this—do you? You like it, don't you?" He reached out an awkward hand and touched the lace over her hand that lay upturned on the table, mirrored as if in black ice.

She wagged her head, and then swiftly patted his knuckles with a look of funny pity, as if she was patting a foolish boy who was swinging away on his hobby horse with a warm smile on his face.

"Not a little bit! Of course I do like it. Do you think I'd let you bring books all the time, and listen to you talk books, and talk them back to you, if I didn't like it? I'd make a big yawn in your face and tell you I was very tired and please to bring bonbons instead.

"I like them. I like to even feel them in my hands. I like the soft bindings of them and the glinting edges and the look of the words.

"All the books I have read are just like so many folks to me. They live right along with me. And they are all different. That little green book is a wood nymph; it's such a cool little thing, and the tales in it, don't you know, are like that too? About shepherds and green hillsides and pipers. When I'm hot I like to read it.

A Bibliomaniac, Too

"And then this funny one. This is a gypsy; this scarlet one. And she has black hair and a red mouth and brass rings in her ears and red-heeled slippers. And the tales in her are like her, too—rioting with color and the call of the road, and love tales.

"Some books are gray Quakers, and some of them are little Dresden dolls, with silly little French marquises in them and blue and gold flowers on the outside of them."

Bettina put up her chin and reached for a flat little book covered with violet silk and broidered with gold fleur de lis. "Wouldn't you know, wouldn't you know—of course you would, because you are wise—that Aucassin and Nicolette lived in this?"

The lean Billy nodded violently, pushing his glasses closer on his nose. "You—you are the—I might say, the queerest girl I ever knew. You are"—delightedly—"you are a bibliomaniac yourself. That's the way we love books. But a—really, most women, you know, don't feel that; don't even know what we mean when we tell about it. I never knew a woman who did."

Bettina looked at him with solemn eyes. "It's you that taught me so." She pulled her shoulders 'most to her ears. "I knew books a little, but you have made me love them. I have grown wise in writen things. I used to think"—she hugged an elbow with either hand and leaned over to him, nodding her head—"I used to think that all you—all of the wise people, like you—were slow; and now—now I think you are wonderful."

The lean Billy put down his green-backed book that made Bettina think of a nymph. The red color in his face made his gray eyes look light, like steel. He twitched his glasses in gratified fashion.

"To-night You're a Nicolette"

"You had the love of it all the time, only no one ever made you know it. You are different from the rest of the women folks. It's a—I like to talk to you, and—you understand. You are different from the others. Why, you know, some of them have—have really no—no understanding of us, or our love for first editions, and rare bindings, and the beauty of written words."

The lean Billy suddenly flushed up hot and red; but he struck out, with twitching of eyeglasses and anxious eyebrows. "Do you know to-night you are like a Nicolette out of that violet book, with your hair—a—flat like that; and the frock and a—that—your hair is very pretty in the light; it shines——" He flounders wildly, but he boldly took Bettina's hand from the black table, that mirrored it like ice, and kissed it.

Bettina quoted, while she pulled it away, in a laughing voice: "Nicolette so fair of face." And then she stood up. "Did you bring any of your own stuff, that's going to make you famous if you will only quit being so lazy?"

Billy laughed. "In my pocket."

Betty fled to the hall in her whispering skirts; and after that, when she came back with a great roll of white paper with typewritten and scrawled verses on it, Billy read his poetry to Bettina, and she listened with parted, scarlet mouth, and her chin on her blue-velured palm, with her elbow on a stack of books teetering on the divan between them.

And the lean Billy's heart sported as big a crack as that of the Billy with the mahogany face.

The Manicure Lady

She and the Head Barber Disagree About the Heat

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"IT'S awfully hot to-day, George," said the Manicure Lady. "The humidity is awful much."

"I like it," said the Head Barber. "I had the missus out all day yesterday. We was to Coney. I don't care how hot it gets. The missus kicked a little, and the baby got prickly heat, but I felt all to the good."

"I don't like the hot days," said the Manicure Lady. "It's all right for a skinny person, but when a lady gets up to 170 pounds adipose the rays of the sun is sure a fearful cross to bear. I am getting a little heavy myself, George, though of course I have the shoulders and the height to carry it.

"Wilfred is skinny, like you, and he says the weather can't come too hot for him. He's up to the flat now, writing an ode to Summer. I am that languid I can't hardly sit up in my chair. I wish I was to some seaside resort."

"I'm sorry," said the sympathetic Head Barber. "Now if you had been married for three or four years you might have a chance to go down to the Mothers' Seaside Rest. Of course, the way things is, I don't know where you can go."

"Oh, don't worry about me," snapped the Manicure Lady. "I'll find some place to go before long. I ain't going to set around this barber shop listening to the electric fan.

It's Great Up in Maine

"I believe I'll go up in Maine. They say it's great up there. It must be fine to catch them codfish and listen to the waves telling their stories to the stern and rock-bound hotels on the beach. Was you ever in Maine?"

"I was there once," said the Head Barber. "I went there to build up. The doctor said I was all run down, and advised me to go to some dry climate. I went to Maine.

"It's a great State, Maine. The people is kind and law abiding, and if you know the ropes you can get some pretty fair spirits. It ain't what you could call high-proof stuff, but it's better than nothing and helps you to forget that you are in Maine. I only went fishing once.

"There was a kind old fellow which had followed the fishing business for years and years and years. He knew so much about fishing that the fish didn't have a chance in the world with him.

"Every time he put out to sea he came back with enough codfish to feed a New York bread line. His nose looked like a codfish ball. He talked codfish and dreamed codfish. He took cod liver oil for a chaser.

"'You'll find the cod a mighty gentle fish, young feller,' he says to me when we was going out in the boat. 'Some of them has peevish streaks when they feel the hook in their mouth, but they soon get over it. Man and boy,' he says, 'I have yanked codfish by the millions into this old dory, and if Providence spares me I'll get a million more before I die.'"

Didn't Like His Looks

"Did you catch any?" asked the Manicure Lady.

"Not many," said the Head Barber. "I caught one. It was a fierce old male, and as it came to the surface its eyes shone in their hatred for the human race. It took one look at me and then shot back down into what one of them poets call the vasty deep.

"The line went through my hands like Colin going through the field at Sheepshead, and a funny, hot feeling came into my palms. See this mark here on the right hand? That's the scar the fishline made when the codfish was beating it.

"'Yank him in,' said the old fisherman. 'Don't humor him. Treat him mean and ugly,' he says, 'like you might treat your wife.' So I finally gets the big fellow into the boat, but once was enough."

"Mercy!" said the Manicure Lady. "I don't want none of that kind of fishing. Ain't there some place where I can go and catch minnows?"

"Lots of places," replied the Head Barber, "but not in Maine. Up there the fish is like the peole, big and husky from fighting for something to eat.

"It's a rocky country, Maine, and you better stick to the shop, girl. Take your vacation in the Winter, when you can enjoy it. There comes a customer now. Whatcha kicking about?"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

ENGAGED MAN'S PRIVILEGE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady, twenty years of age, and for the past year and a half have kept company with a gentleman of the same age. I like him very much, and my parents have no objections to my going with him. Two weeks ago he made me a present of a ring. Although we did not have an engagement party, he claims that we are engaged all the same. Now, last week he kissed me, and I gave him a good scolding for doing so, which made him feel very bad. He said that he thought he has been going with me long enough to have that privilege. When he left me he was very angry. Do you think I ought to let him kiss me? The reason I made such a fuss was because I thought he would think less of me if I gave him that privilege. Was I right in acting that way?

B. H.

AN engagement party does not sanction an engagement; it merely announces it to the public. I should think you might consider yourself engaged to him, and in that case he certainly has the right to kiss you. Of course, if you do not care for him enough to be engaged you should not allow him to kiss you; but otherwise it is quite natural that he should expect to.

THE MAN'S PLACE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl seventeen years of age, and wish to ask your advice in this matter. I have known a young man for about a year, but never had much to do with him, as I was very bashful at the time. The other day I paid a visit to his sister, but unfortunately she was not at home, and he asked me to go out with him, which I did. Now, Miss Fairfax, could you tell me how I could become more intimate with this man, as I love him dearly and know his sister well?

ANXIOUS.

THERE is nothing you can do but make yourself pleasant when you meet him. If you go much to the house, it will look as though you were running after him. If he has taken a liking to you, he will be sure to make the attempt to see you as often as possible.

Take Proper Care of Your Feet

AT this time of the year especially, excellent care should be taken of the feet. The least bit of warm weather often causes a world of trouble. Anything bordering on a corn or callous place should be treated and gotten rid of before the very hot weather commences. The feet should be bathed and powdered once a day at least, and twice if convenient. Many people suffer unspeakable tortures with corns instead of going to a chiropodist and having them taken care of in time. Yet, strange to say, they would not hesitate in visiting a dentist if their teeth bothered them.

Excessive moisture in the feet causes considerable trouble. This is due mostly to defective circulation, and cannot be prevented until the circulation is invigorated. It may be relieved, however, by sprinkling on the feet and between the toes the following powder, after bathing: Lycopodium, 3 drachms; alum, 1 drachm; tannin, 30 grains.

Hot salt baths are a help for feet inclined to swell, and rubbing the soles with a cut lemon will ease them when fatigued from long standing.

Canvas shoes are to be highly recommended for wear in the hot Summer months. They are cool and comfortable and give the feet a rest from the close confinement of the usual leather shoe. Lisle thread stockings are most comfortable. They should be changed daily. It is best to have several pairs of shoes and wear them alternately.

A delightful herb foot bath for sensitive feet is made as follows: Boil for twenty minutes in five quarts of water the following herbs: Dried mint, one ounce; dried sage, one ounce; dried angelica, three ounces; juniper berries, half ounce; rosemary leaves, one pound. The foot bath should be warm. Bathe the feet for fifteen or twenty minutes before retiring.

THE PRICE WE PAY FOR PLEASURE

MADELINE grimly surveyed a sun-burned nose in her mirror.

"Ruth and I have been to a potato roast," said she. "Potato roasts are great fun." Madeline appeared not to mean what she said.

"Tell me about it," said the girl who listens, serene in the consciousness of an unblemished complexion.

"It was Ruth's idea," said Madeline. "In the Spring Ruth's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of picnics. She knew of a beautiful spot twenty-five miles away, where we could build a rousing fire and roast potatoes and eat fresh strawberry pie and be sublimely at peace for a long, glad day. Ruth's description of the contemplated treat would have moved a stone."

Madeline settled back to tell the story.

"We started early," she said. "I had been up since 6 o'clock making sandwiches. Ruth carried a pasteboard box at an angle denoting watchful anxiety. In it was the strawberry pie.

Making a Fire

"We rode on the car for what seemed hours and hours. Then we got off and walked and walked."

"But we didn't get there," said Madeline. "We just sat down when we could walk no farther, and when juice had begun to trickle out of the pasteboard box down the front of Ruth's new pongee outing dress. We chose a place with one tree and some grass. I sat down under the tree and Ruth began to make the fire.

"The way Ruth builds a fire is first to lay all the sandwiches and cake and devilled eggs around on the grass, so she can use the paper they are wrapped in for kindling. By the time you are through protesting at such methods there is a crackling and snapping and smoking and Ruth is poking the potatoes into the fire.

"But there wasn't the proper crackling and snapping this time. There was only a great deal of smoke, through which Ruth remarked hopefully that the wood was evidently wet, but that everything would be all right in a moment. Ruth's optimism is delightful, but it isn't practical. Almost before she got through saying that everything would be all right, the fire, seeming to despair of making an impression on the damp wood, had started to burn its way through the dead grass left over from last year toward our precious strawberry pie.

"Ruth seized a stick and began beating the flames frantically. She did not aim well, for she beat the strawberry pie. While she paused to mourn over that the fire started off joyously for the devilled eggs. Ruth followed. She beat and thrust and pounded with all her might. She made desperate attacks upon the same little flame, and whenever she stopped for breath it would spring up again in the cheeriest way imaginable.

"Ruth stopped at last and looked with an air of deep reproach at me sitting under the one tree. That caused me to get a stick and begin to beat, too. It was fine exercise. We panted and choked and gasped and wept because of the smoke.

"We put out the fire at last. Ruth and I then found time to look at each other with red-rimmed eyes. Around us stretched an irregular space of charred grass. In the centre was Ruth's carefully erected pile of firewood, absolutely untouched by the flames, but here and there a shiny raw potato gleaned from its crevices.

Paying the Penalty

"There was one devilled egg which had rolled out of the circle of devastation. I picked it up and ate it slowly, while Ruth watched me as if I were taking that devilled egg out of the mouths of starving babes.

"'Well,' said Ruth in a rather unpleasant tone, 'I don't see any fun in this. I am going home.'

"One would have thought from Ruth's accusing manner that I had conceived, planned and executed the potato roast.

"All the way home Ruth drew the fascinated attention of all, but wild horses wouldn't have drawn from me the information which she lacked, that a large smudge decorated her nose and thus made her the observed of all observers."

"That is nothing," said the girl who listens, "to the sunburn that is decorating your nose at the present moment."

Madeline took another glance at her injured feature. "It will begin to peel to-morrow," she said mournfully.

GLACIA CALLA RESCUES GEMS SHE PAWNED

Granted Injunction Restraining Dennett from Disposing of the Tickets.

Glacia Calla came into the limelight to-day when Judge Richardson in the Superior Court granted her a temporary injunction restraining Edward E. Dennett of Fitchburg from selling or disposing of two tickets on the Collateral Loan Company.

The pawn tickets call for a diamond and pearl necklace upon which $2,000 was loaned, and a diamond and pearl bracelet upon which the loan company advanced $200. They were "put in" on January 15.

The injunction is granted to Lillian G. Roy, that being the opera singer's name in private life. In her declaration she alleged that Dennett took the tickets from her, representing that he had secured a $1,000 loan and would give the tickets as security. She states that no such loan was made.

She further alleges that on April 29 "Dennett, with intent to defraud, had the Collateral Loan Company cancel the tickets issued to her and had them made out in his name." She states in her declaration that the loan company issued the tickets despite the fact that she gave them full information and warned them

LEAGUE PLANS FOR CHICAGO CONVENTION

Special Rate Fares From All Over Country for New Party Delegates.

NEW YORK, June 25.—A sub-committee of the national committee of the Independence Party will meet in Chicago, July 10, for the purpose of perfecting arrangements for holding the national convention of the party in that city July 27 and 28.

The sub-committee will sit daily after July 10 and will discuss and decide upon all the preliminary arrangements for the convention, issue contracts for decorations, printing, tickets, badges, etc.

The convention will be held at Orchestra Hall, on the lake front, and the first session will be Monday evening, July 27.

The Central Passenger Association, Trunk Line Commission and New England Passenger Association have adopted a rate of one and one-half fares for the round trip, tickets good leaving Chicago up to and including July 31.

The Eastern delegates in the cities of New York and Boston will co-operate in obtaining special trains to convey the Independence Party men to and from Chicago. There will probably be two such trains from New York and at least one from Boston. The trains will be equipped with Pullman sleeping cars, baggage cars and dining cars.

The New York delegation expects to take its departure for the convention on the morning of Sunday, July 26, reaching Chicago Monday morning.

There will be approximately one thousand delegates in the National convention of the Independence Party.

POLICE IN WILD PISTOL CHASE FOR BURGLAR

ALLEGED THIEF IN SOLDIER'S GARB CAUGHT AFTER LIVELY DASH IN NORTH END.

Wearing a soldier's uniform and carrying a suit case filled with clothing and jewelry, which the police believe to have been stolen, Harry Thistle, seventeen years old, and claiming to be a soldier at Fort Revere, was arrested after a lively one-mile chase through the streets early this morning, charged with breaking and entering the clothing store of Abraham Cohen, in Hanover street.

Patrolman Widdup, passing the store, saw the front door open. The interior was in darkness. Revolver in hand, he entered, stumbling over two well-filled suit-cases on the floor. After entering, the officer heard a noise outside, and saw a young fellow running through Hanover street at top speed. He carried a suitcase.

Widdup gave chase, firing several shots in the air to frighten the fugitive. The chase led through Hanover street, adjacent streets, around Rowe's Wharf and thence into Commercial street. Thistle, in the uniform, ran into the arms of Patrolman McDonald.

At the police station he refused to talk about himself, further than to say he was a soldier. Besides the jewelry and clothing in the suit case, the police found a jimmy, which, they say, fitted the marks on the door of Cohen's store.

Thistle's picture is in the rogue's gallery at police headquarters. The police are looking up his record.

ROOSEVELT, JR., GIVEN YEAR TO STUDY MINING

President Explains Story That "Teddy, Jr.," Will Work for Steel Trust.

Harvard students who remain in Cambridge are to-day discussing the statement which President Roosevelt authorized Secretary Loeb to make public regarding the story that his son, Theodore, Jr., is going to work for the Steel Trust this Summer, having been given a year's leave of absence from college.

This discussion has brought out the fact that the President's son "plugged" overtime on his studies in order to finish the four-year course at Harvard in three years, which he succeeded in doing, for the purpose of getting a year to study the business end of handling mining property. Young Theodore does not intend to enter a profession, according to his friends at Dunster Hall, where he roomed. He intends to learn the mining business.

Another interesting fact in connection with young "Teddy's" graduation is that his room-mate, Shaun Kelly, also completed the four-year course in three years. This is considered a remarkable feat by students, and it shows that Roosevelt and his room-mate were hustlers.

Kelly is now at Pagoda, Routt County, Col., where he will spend the Summer. He, too, has secured a year's leave of absence from college. They will return next June to graduate with their class. Although both are technically through college, they will return in order to graduate with their class, rather than graduate with the class of 1908. When a student enters Harvard with a class he likes to remain with it and be identified with it ever after.

An Oyster Bay dispatch says President Roosevelt to-day authorized Secretary Loeb to make public a statement regarding the story that young Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is going to work for the Steel Trust this summer. The President is extremely angry, because, he says, the story seems to imply that he might be influenced in his attitude toward the trust by his son's going to work for it.

Secretary Loeb sets forth that the President has no direct knowledge that the firm by which young Roosevelt is to be employed is controlled by the trust, and that in any event the boy is merely to work as a laborer.

The statement reads:

"The story as regards its implication is a pure falsehood. John C. Greenway, who was in the President's regiment, has told young Roosevelt that he will try him on a job simply as one of the ordinary miners and exactly as he tries hundreds of other men every year and is trying hundreds this year."

Young Theodore may join his mother on the Mayflower after the New London races and return with her to Sagamore Hill.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The city has just experienced the hottest day for thirty-four years. The thermometer registered 102 degrees in the shade. As a result of the torridity and humidity several cases of prostration were reported.

ENEMY'S FLEET BOMBARDED IN HUB WAR GAME

Big Guns at Winthrop Forts Roar Defiance at Target Ten Miles Out at Sea.

Target practice at Fort Heath, Winthrop, to-day was the feature of the military maneuvres which are now being held in Boston harbor. An imaginary hostile fleet is threatening to destroy the coast defences here and swoop in and take Boston.

To-day ten shots are being fired from Fort Heath at a target placed 7,000 yards out in the bay.

The Ninth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Militia is quartered during the maneuvres at Forts Banks and Heath, Winthrop, and to-day the officers of the regiment were all at Fort Heath, taking a keen interest in the firing of the big guns.

All of the morning was taken up in towing the big target far out to sea, where it was finally placed. Then the range-finders went to work and soon had the big rifles bearing on the target, which to the naked eye was but a twinkle of red.

The first shot was fired from gun No. 1 at just 10 minutes before 12 o'clock. The missile fired weighed 1,050 pounds and was projected from the rifle by a charge of 260 pounds of smokeless powder. The missile was of the new pattern of mushroom head projectiles.

The shot fell 150 yards short of the target. It rebounded from the water three times, each time hurling a huge white geyser of salt water high in the air. This shot was followed at intervals by the nine others, the afternoon being well worn away by the time the tenth was fired.

The officers at the fort are taking all kinds of data to-day from the firing of the guns in addition to special attention being paid to the calibration, which is nothing more than in determining how far short of theoretically perfect the gun's mechanism works.

While the guns were being fired a large crowd of Summer guests at Winthrop thronged to the beach to see the flash of the rifles and to see the great geysers of water leap up far out at sea showing when and where the missiles struck.

"PADDY" DUFFY SENT TO THE STATE FARM

William D. Duffy, well-known to baseball fans as "Paddy," was sentenced to the State Farm upon the charge of vagrancy by Judge Almy in the Cambridge Police Court to-day. He appealed, and was held in $400. Duffy had his hands frozen last Winter, and lost the use of them for baseball purposes.

J. P. MORGAN IN HAPPY MOOD OFF TO EUROPE

Financier Declares Business Prospects Have Improved in Last Few Weeks.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 25.—J. Pierpont Morgan, in exceedingly good humor, because Yale saw fit to bestow upon him the degree of LL. D., sailed to-day on the steamship Provence for Europe. Although the financier is usually loath to talk with newspaper men, he called the reporters into his stateroom and told them to fire away with questions.

Asked why he was going abroad so soon again—having returned only a week ago—he replied:

"I came over only to attend the wedding of my niece Ursula to the Rev. Dr. William Simon. I have an important engagement on the other side and must be there on a certain day. You may say for me, however, that I am in an optimistic mood and in the few days I have spent at home I have noticed a marked revival of business and a great improvement in finances, all coming in the few weeks I spent abroad."

Mr. Morgan said he felt greatly depressed over the death of Grover Cleveland.

"He was one of my most intimate friends for many years," he went on. "I considered him the most lovable man in the world and the United States lost one of its greatest statesmen in his death. I would like to pay him a great tribute, but the news came to me so suddenly it would require a long time to reflect."

Here the financier stopped.

"What do you think of your degree?" was asked.

"It's bully to be a doctor of laws," was his answer.

"Were you ever a candidate for the Ananias Club?" one reporter ventured.

Mr. Morgan smiled. "I believe," he rejoined, "I can conscientiously say I never was. I'd rather be an LL. D."

Bilious Troubles

Bile causes no end of trouble. Sick headaches, bilious attacks, jaundice, constipation and many distressing ailments arise from an excess of bile, or from obstruction of the bile duct. Inactivity, sedentary occupations and indiscretion in feeding and drinking are bile blunders that need to be guarded against. When the liver is disordered the best bile correctives are because they relieve the overworked liver, and gently stimulate it when it is sluggish. These pills control the flow of bile, restore its right consistency, and work for the immediate and lasting benefit of the stomach, bowels and blood. Whenever a furred tongue, dull, yellowish eyes, nausea, or headache indicate bilious conditions, use Beecham's Pills at once, to correct the bile and

BEECHAM'S PILLS

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

RACING AUTOISTS HAVE VERY NARROW ESCAPE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., June 25.—Harry Kilpatrick and Stevens Carusso had a decidedly narrow escape from severe if not fatal injury while driving the famous Hotchkiss in the Delaware Water Gap hill climb this morning. The car was the next to last to be started, it having been held back in order to make a record. The hill is about a mile long, full of quick and tortuous turns, dangerous in the extreme, and it is really wonderful that some fatalities have not been recorded.

The Hotchkiss got an excellent start. She was cutting the pace out like the wind, when in making a quick right angle turn she skidded wide and headed for Cherry Valley, a sure drop of 1,500 feet. Fortunately a heavy post saved them. The car ran so that the post got between the left front wheel and the frame of the car throwing Carusso some twenty feet in the air and to one side. Neither men was injured. The car was badly used up and yet Kilpatrick drove it back to town even though the left front wheel war at an angle of forty degrees and minus a tire. The course became so crowded after this that the referee called the events off.

A Rambler touring car selling for $1,000 made the best time on the hill, 1 minute 52 seconds, defeating in time at least such cars as the Italian Zust and the American Studebaker. The Rambler won her class event quite handily. The second best time of the day was made by the Zust, 1 minute 57 seconds. The little Buick runabout won over the Jackson, her time being 2 minutes 13 2-5 seconds. This car was driven by Harold Church, a Boston boy who is spending the Summer in the mountains. The Studebaker had a walk over in her class as did the Zust in hers. The summary:

Gasoline cars, selling for $851 to $1,250, won by H. D. Church, Buick, 2.13 2-5, second, J. A. Rutan, Jackson. Time—2.20.

Cars selling $1,251 to $2,000, won by W. H. Pierce, Rambler. Time—1.40 2-5; second, Bert Clark, Jackson. Time—1.46 2-5.

Cars selling $2,001 to $3,001 won by Frank Yeager, Studebaker. Time—2.23 2-5.

Cars selling for $4,001 and over, won by James Young, Zust. Time—2.04.

Open to all cars won by James Young, Zust. Time—1.57.

OVER $40,000 GATE RECEIPTS ON DERBY DAY

Those figuring the receipts the day of the $50,000 American Trotting Derby at Readville in the grand circuit meeting next August can learn something of the immense crowd expected in the following plans already mapped out by the directors of the New England Breeders' Association:

There is to be erected 850 boxes that will be sold for a premium of $5 each, a total of $4,250; 2,200 seats in the vicinity of these boxes will bring a premium of $2 each, or a total of $4,400; then will be built additional bleachers to seat 8,000, the price of which will be $1 premium, or a total of $8,000. This brings the amount of premiums to $16,650, and adding to the sum the regular $1 admission extra, as the prices quoted for the seats are over and above the admission, is for the 11,050 seats just that number of dollars, which makes the grand total receipts foot to $27,700.

It must be borne in mind that outside of this thousands of persons will pay for just an admission, being willing to take their chances in seeing the great race from the quarter-stretch, or from the infield, while, too, will be thousands in teams and automobiles. No doubt fully 15,000 can be counted upon in this way, and would make the day's receipts amount to the tidy sum of some over $40,000.

BET NELSON WON'T LAST 25 ROUNDS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—Joe Gans is almost a prohibitive favorite over Battling Nelson at odds of 10 to 6, with little money offered. There is much betting, however, at even money that Nelson will not last twenty-five rounds.

Gans weighed 134 pounds yesterday, and as he has to make only 133 pounds, ringside, the weight question, which gave him so much trouble at Goldfield, practically is eliminated. Gans is indignant over reports that he has been loafing. He also says that he will whip Nelson decisively, so there will never be any more question of their ability as fighters.

GEORGE HACK REPORTED DEAD

LONDON, June 25.—It is rumored here that George Hackenschmidt, the wrestler, is dead at Aix-la-Chappelle, where he went several weeks ago to recover from injuries received in his wrestling match with Frank Gotch, in which he lost the world's championship to the American.

The report is as yet unconfirmed.

ELBERFELD MAY TAKE GRIFFITH'S JOB AS MANAGER

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Shortstop Norman Elberfeld will probably succeed Clark Griffith, who has resigned as manager of the Highlanders, owing to his ill-success in the management of that team this season.

HARVARD '05 CREW WON.

One of the most interesting and exciting events of the commencement programme at Harvard was the boat race between 1905 and 1902 on the Charles River, the former winning.

PLAYER HOFFMAN SUSTAINED.

CINCINNATI, June 25.—Although Player B. C. Hoffman was sustained by the National Baseball Commission in his claim against the Boston National League Club for salary, he must pay back to that club part of advance money that he received.

WOLCOTTS WANT GAME.

The Wolcotts of Dorchester want a game with any fourteen and fifteen-year old team for Saturday, the Highlands preferred. Game can be arranged by telephoning Haymarket 2, 1198, between 9 and 5 o'clock. John Mulhall.

HARRY LEWIS STARTS WORK FOR DONOVAN

Harry Lewis, who showed by his victory over Larry Temple at the Armory A. A. on Tuesday night that he is a classy performer of the highest type, started for Augusta, Me., early yesterday morning to resume training for his bout with Jim Donovan of New York at Bangor on next Monday.

Donovan by his victories over Willie Lewis, Terry Martin and Tommy Sullivan, is a worthy foeman for the welterweight champion. Indeed the bout is so promising that the Armory A. A. matchmaker tried to get it, but Promoter Hanks beat them to it. Hanks is one of the biggest hustlers ever connected with the boxing game and knows a good card from a poor one.

The full card for the twenty-ninth is made up of eight bouts and has created a stir all over the Pine Tree State. In fact the attendance is expected to reach 5,000, for there will be excursions from all over the State and even from St. John, N. B., from where a party of several hundred is expected.

The show will be the night before the Maine State Republican Convention, when there will be thousands of visitors in Bangor.

The contest will be held at the spacious auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 5,000 persons comfortably. The advance sale is enormous, testifying to the fact that the popular prices quoted by Promoter Hanks have appealed to the sporting men. The indications are that the hall will be jammed to the doors. Never before has there been such a demand for the pasteboards.

RACE MEETING AT HILLSGROVE

PROVIDENCE, June 25.—Secretary William T. Parker of the Hillsgrove race track announces the following classes for his meeting July 21-23, inclusive, with the purses $300 in each event. Entries close July 14, and records made that day no bar:

Trotting—2:14, 2:17, 2:21, 2:25 and 2:30.
Pacing, free for all—2:12, 2:15, 2:19, 2:23, 2:26 and 2:30.

AMATEURS BUNCHED FOR SECOND PLACE IN VOTES

While the only shift in the standing of the contestants in the BOSTON AMERICAN Baseball Contest for the most popular professional and amateur player in the latest returns is Gessler of the Red Sox moving up one place over Carrigan, yet there was a pretty good complement tendered to both "Old Cy" Young and Finley of the Hawthorne A. C. by their admirers.

There is a close struggle going on in the amateur end of the contest for second honors, as less than 200 votes separate the four players, Sharry, Broders, Finley and McDonald, in the standing to-day. The score:

BURCHELL AND FLAHERTY WORK QUICK STRIKE

In the first game of the series between the Boston Red Sox and the Chicago White Sox at the South Side Grounds Burchell, a sidewheeler in the box for the Bostonians, whipped one over the plate when Sullivan, at bat, wasn't looking.

That is, Burchell thought Sullivan wasn't looking. But the foxy catcher was, and he whaled away, securing a single.

Burchell is an imitator of Patsy Flaherty, the Boston Dove southpaw, to that extent. Flaherty was formerly with the White Sox, and it's probable he is and was the greatest exponent of the quick delivery of any man in the game to-day.

He perfected that motion when he was with Louisville, in the American Association, and he's probably the only man that ever fanned a batsman on one whirl of the bat.

You've seen Patsy pitch. The batsman fouls.

The catcher throws the ball to the pitcher, leaps to his position, and before the batsman has recovered his poise or has any notion that the pitcher is about to deliver a ball he whizzes it over the plate.

Well, Patsy was in the box for Louisville. Minneapolis was the enemy and one of the sluggers was at bat. Patsy wound up. He sent in one square over the plate and the slugger slugged with all his might. He fanned so hard that he revolved like a top.

Old Pop Schriver was behind the bat.

He whizzed the ball down to Patsy, who took no aim, but sent it over without the semblance of a curve.

The batsman just coming around for the second time whizzed away at the ball. He missed and the effort sent him on another spin.

"Pop" whiffed the ball to Patsy again and the pitcher sent the third one over without the semblance of a windup. The batsman whirling for the second time smashed again.

"Three strikes," howled the umpire.

The batsman chased to the players' bench the most disgusted man that ever left the plate.

SCHOOL NINE CAPTAINS.

Nearly all the school baseball teams have chosen captains for next season. The following men have been elected: English High, "Jocko" Kelly, third base; Boston Latin, Harold McKenna, pitcher; Dorchester High, "Chick" Fraser, second base; Somerville High, "Jiggs" Donahue, catcher; Everett High, "Rosey" Rosenthal, pitcher; Malden High, Dave Morey, pitcher.

MORAN HOPES TO BEAT M'LEAN

Jimmy Moran is training as if his life depended on beating his rival in their twenty-five-mile race behind the motors next Saturday night at Revere. He has often remarked that if he could beat that man MacLean he would give a good bunch of coin and has welcomed the opportunity to get at his enemy in the bike game.

Both will use two-cylinder machines to pace them, which will give all the speed they can carry, and it will be a case of who can hang on with the throttle wide open, and neither intends to be shaken.

The three top amateurs, Connolly, Helander and Drobeck, will also race ten miles behind the motors, and each one of them is anxious to get into the big ranks.

POLICEMEN PLAY BALL.

The "Yaunigans," made up of the reserve policemen of Division 10, defeated the regulars of that house, 16 to 12, in an interesting baseball game at the South End Grounds.

TAILORS' CLEARING HOUSE.

DON'T BE A READY-MADE MAN

GEORGE'S, 14 Summer St. Boston,	GEORGE'S, 259 W. 34th St. New York.	GEORGE'S, 101 S. 15th St. Phila., Pa.

George's Doesn't Shout "Bargains" But We Do Offer Values

With nearly every advertisement shouting "Bargains," the word is so badly abused that no sensible man pays any attention to it. Our offers this week of $15, $18, $20 for Suits and Coats and Trousers, formerly marked $18, $20 and $25, and which were custom made for $40, $45, $50 and $60, are facts which appeal to every man who admires neat dress and appreciates real saving. Our system of securing from the tailors their misfit and uncalled for garments at one-third value readily explains why we can offer twice the values any ready-made house can give. GEORGE'S TAILOR PARLORS, 14 SUMMER STREET. Near Washington. Open Saturday night. If alterations are necessary to improve the fit we make them free of charge.

Congratulations to Louisiana—

To the New Orleans Item and to Other Good Anti-Gambling Fighters

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

By a vote of 8 to 7—apparently the usual close contest of the gamblers—the Joint Judiciary Committee of the Senate of Louisiana has given a favorable report on the Locke Anti-Gambling Bill.

Regardless of the final action by the Senate, Louisiana evidently means to put things through in a hurry. She has citizens that do not wait when they have made up their minds.

The BOSTON AMERICAN congratulates all of those that made the good fight, not forgetting Archbishop James H. Blenk, of New Orleans, who came out against gambling, as did Archbishop Farley of New York City.

The New Orleans Item has made a persistent fight in defence of decency, of the home and against public gambling.

Before long the "gentlemen of the Jockey Club," the touts, blacklegs and bookmakers wishing to take in stolen money, wishing to live without work, will have to find fields of activity somewhere outside of the United States.

Human weaknesses may be, as men say, "ineradicable." It may be that you cannot "reform men," but YOU CAN PREVENT BLOODSUCKERS FROM PREYING UPON THE WEAKNESS OF FEEBLER MEN, AND THE PEOPLE PROPOSE TO DO THAT.

That has been proved in New Jersey, in Missouri, in Illinois, in New York, and we believe that it will be proved in Louisiana.

The 'Peace Murders'

They Are Numerous, but, Happily, DIMINISHING, in Spite of Financial Opposition to the Diminution

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Edward A. Mosely, secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission, talked to the Master Car Builders' annual convention about peace time murders on railroads and safety appliances. He mentioned casually the fact that, on the railroads alone, somebody is hurt EVERY TWO HOURS AND FORTY MINUTES IN THE YEAR.

He also mentioned the fact that since the law has compelled the use of safety appliances the number of trainmen killed, instead of being one in every twenty, is ONLY one in seventy-three.

It is interesting to know that the railroads are killing one trainman in seventy-three instead of one in twenty. It would be still more interesting to learn that they had spent the necessary money to prevent the killing of even one in seventy-three. It IS a question of money.

It is important for readers to remember that the use of safety appliances WAS FOUGHT PERSISTENTLY BY THE PUBLIC CORPORATIONS. It is evaded by them very largely at this moment. THE IMPORTANCE OF ECONOMY WAS SOLEMNLY URGED, AND IS STILL SOLEMNLY URGED, AS A REASON FOR SAVING ON SAFETY APPLIANCES AND BEING RECKLESS WITH HUMAN LIFE.

Our government has become largely an industrial government. The big favorites of fortune in olden days used to kill men in war, for amusement, or profit, or vanity. The people had a hard struggle to overcome that.

Now the big favorites of fortune kill men in industry FOR PROFIT ONLY. They kill them quickly and rather mercifully with the bumping of two freight cars; they kill them also as children, brutally, in glass factories and mines and mills. They kill them slowly with low wages and worry and unhealthy tenements.

The people must still fight for their lives, fight for safety devices, as they fought in the old days for freedom from the draft and the battlefield.

ABD-EL AZIZ

By James J. Montague

(Abd-el Aziz, Sultan of Morocco, has been assassinated again.—News Item.)

BANG! A bullet goes! Whizz!
And so endeth the bizz,
The temporal business of Abd-el Aziz—
Which may be the truth—though we doubt that it is.
And so, ere you wofully wimple: "Alas,
Could so horrid a horror indeed come to pass?
Could any assassin rise up and assas
Great Abd-el Aziz?"
Just reflect that he is
As calmly accustomed to violent death
As he is to the business of drawing his breath.
At breakfast he's shot when the grape-fruit is served
And stabbed with the coffee, yet quite un-unnerved
He lights his cigar on the fuse of the bomb
That hisses beside him, with never a qualm.

FOR the pirates and footpads and bandits and so forth
That sit on his door steps and hope he will show forth
Are musical Moors, and a surname like that
Which Abd-el Aziz carries 'round in Rebat
So jars on their ears
That they fiercely beset him
With axes and spears,
Loud vowing to get him,
And so, though he looks like a sketch of a sieve,
The fact that he still contrives somehow to live
Is a thing that they honestly cannot forgive.

"HERE'S a name," they exclaim, "like a leak in a pipe,
Like the song that attends on the stewing of tripe,
Like the sizzle of hose,
Or the ziz of a siphon,
Or a cold in the nose
Of a fabulous Gryphon.
Which is why, in the interest of harmony, purely,
We vow we'll destroy him completely and surely;
With dum-dums, and barbs, and sharp shrapnel we'll fill him,
Until, we believe, we shall finally kill him."

YET despite all these dastardly devilish plots,
Despite of the fact he's so marked up with shots
That in any direction
You happen to view him,
In segment or section,
The daylight shows through him,
Old Abd-el Aziz, although dented and checkered,
Is plugging along for Methuselah's record,
And Abd-el's content
And untroubled or flurried,
But they say the old gent
Is a little bit worried.

Little Editorials from the People

JUDGE HEARST BY HIS ENEMIES

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Inclosed you will find article on Mr. Hearst from the Taunton Daily Gazette of June 22. I am sick of the "rapping" this paper gives Mr. Hearst on every occasion it can. This paper printed those paid editorials in favor of Mr. Draper of which you spoke in the BOSTON AMERICAN some months ago. A FRIEND.

Taunton.

A QUESTION OF AUTHORITY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Yesterday I was for Roosevelt. To-day I would spill the last drop of ink in this bottle to defeat his pretentions to be the ruler and grandmother of our common country. One who has not the psychology to leave it to President Eliot to punish naughty boys for swiping books from the college library would not make a good grandparent to our democratic institutions. Whatever the sovereign's fancy may devise in restraint of a federal congress of corporation godmothers—and hungry foundlings of ward politics—let there be loyal shouting; but the New England town meeting and the school teacher's authority must be preserved.

We can't row, what's the use? But we can make more money on a Harvard-Yale football game than any bullfight ever pulled off in Spain. "HARVARD '99."

Lesson I.—The Tree

THE Tree is a large chunk of wood fringed with Leaves. When you see Trees in a crowd, you call them a For-est.

It is un-pleas-ant to be up a Tree un-less you are a Squir-rel.

Trees at first sight ap-pear to be tak-ing things eas-y, yet they ful-fil a use-ful mis-sion. If there were no Trees, thou-sands of little Boys and Girls would be un-able to re-cite "Woodman, spare that Tree." Be-sides this, Trees are use-ful as ho-tels for Birds and to catch Bal-loon-ists in.

There are many kinds of Trees, such as—

Chest-nut Trees.
Fam-i-ly Trees.
Shoe Trees.
Sol-diers T'ree by Kip-ling.

Chest-nut Trees are of sev-er-al kinds, the best known be-ing Harp-er's Weekly.

Fam-i-ly Trees are also of sev-er-al kinds, and are fun-ny because if a Man's great-great-great-great-great-grand-father was hanged, the Man is proud of it, while if there are any sus-pend-ed ones on branches low-er down the Man is very much a-shamed of it.

Shoe Trees are used in-stead of Feet to fill Shoes with. Cu-ri-ous-ly, they nev-er suf-fer from Corns.

Soldiers T'ree is not a re-al Tree, but a branch of lit-er-a-ture.

Trees are clothed with Bark, which has giv-en rise to many de-lect-able jests about the Dog Tree. Little Boys and Girls should a-gree among them-selves and lead a Pus-sy Wil-low and Dog Tree life.

Lesson II.—The Grass

Grass is the Earth's Hair. Where the Earth has a bald spot it is called a Des-ert or a cit-y Park.

It is hard to in-duce Grass to grow in a field, but it flour-ish-es in gar-den paths and a-long the road-bed of the Erie.

Grass is very use-ful to horses, cows, sheep, goats, etc., which use it for break-fast food, al-though it is not ad-ver-tised. Neb-u-chad-nez-zar al-so ate Grass, but even though he was a King he couldn't make it pop-u-lar. It is eas-i-er to wait un-til the Cow eats it and then eat the Cow.

The Grass soon-er or la-ter si-lent-ly marches over the great-est cities and takes pos-ses-sion of the strong-est for-tres-ses, which shows that any one can get even if he waits long e-nough.

Little Boys and Girls who live in big cit-ies can al-ways tell Grass by the mark:

KEEP OFF

Lesson III.—The Tobacco Plant

The To-bac-co Plant sup-ports pipe mak-ers, to-bac-co-nists, ci-gar-ette man-u-fac-tur-ers and night riders. It is al-so used in some Ci-gars.

Per-sons who smoke know e-nough about To-bac-co, and those who do not smoke do not want to know any-thing about it, so we will now con-clude the Les-son.

A NEW CO-OPERATIVE COMMONWEALTH

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

AND now we have another co-operative colony started in America, where so many have sprung up only to a mushroom growth, while others have grown into powerful organizations.

In casting about for a suitable site for the new colony, the originators of this movement were almost immediately struck by the adaptability of the great waste areas of virgin, fertile soil in the peninsula of Lower California.

Mr. Byron Hall spent several years in the heart of the peninsula. He made a thorough and detailed investigation of the resources of the soil and the opportunities possible.

Experimental gardening proved the soil to be marvellously fertile and the products that could be grown infinite in variety. Water was found to be only forty to ninety feet underground, and there is ample evidence that artesian water could be developed at from 900 to 1,000 feet.

Has 500,000 Acres

MR. HALL selected a tract of 500,000 acres which he regarded as the most promising in all this territory, and, when he was sent to the city of Mexico by La Prosperidad Colony Association to secure a tract, he insisted on getting the particular tract which he had previously selected—and got it.

And now there is a proposition to colonize this on a practical co-operative plan, and to found a new commonwealth where individual effort and ability shall be fostered and rewarded, while community rights and interests are given the fullest and most advanced attention.

In the centre of the corporation's tract of land will be set aside 6,000 acres where a city will be built by the corporation upon the most approved scientific and artistic plan.

It will be a city of health, happiness, beauty and freedom. It will be a garden city, beautiful in every detail, and no structure will be permitted to be erected within its limits which would be unsightly or out of harmony with the beauty, symmetry and safety of the whole.

Equal Rights to All

EACH shareholder will have the right of residence in this city. The ideals of prospective occupants will be artistically carried out, and the houses and other buildings will be rented to the members at a sum proportionate to the cost of erection, the amount expended to be decided by the prospective tenant. About one per cent. of the cost of the building will probably cover the rent, which will include light, heat and water.

No member will be allowed to erect on his or her land any building or other edifice and use or cause the same to be used for immoral purposes, or for any purpose that may be deemed detrimental to the welfare of the commonwealth.

No saloon or place wherein wines and liquors or any kind of intoxicating drinks are sold will be allowed.

No member shall be required to live on his or her land, or cultivate it, unless so desired.

Members may be resident or non-resident, as they may elect. The administration will provide for the cultivation of land belonging to non-residents and will remit all profits accruing to them after the expense of cultivation and marketing has been paid.

Rule by Referendum

THE initiative and referendum and recall will regulate matters relating to the business of the corporation in which members have a voice. Every member will have a voice in the councils of the commonwealth, and all enjoy equal opportunities. Energy, originality and humanity will thus have full scope for the first time in the history of colonial movements.

Freedom of thought will prevail. No religion, cult, ism or economic fad need be subscribed to by any member.

The education of children will be absolutely in the hands of the commonwealth and carried on along rational lines and by individual and eclectic methods, in accord with the highest interest of human nature.

Families shall receive from the commonwealth an allowance for the care and maintenance of each child born, until said child is able to maintain him or herself. Hence each child becomes, practically, the ward of the commonwealth from the day of its birth until it is of age and capable of self-maintenance.

Churches, halls and other buildings will be provided for those who wish to have them, and rented at a nominal rent, as will be the dwellings.

Marriage Held Sacred

THE sacredness of the marriage relation shall be maintained and every possible influence will be brought to bear upon that relation to make it a condition of the greatest happiness and comfort.

The movement grew slowly at first, but, once launched, gathered strength by leaps and bounds.

Within a few weeks it became necessary to hire a hall where public meetings could be attempted—before, in fact, the land itself had been secured—more than fifty men and women enrolled as members and made their first payments on their shares and lands.

Subscriptions began to pour in. One of the strongest banks of the city was designated as depository for the association, where all funds are deposited, subject to the joint check of the president, treasurer and secretary when authorized by the board of trustees.

Within one month more than $1,200 had been paid into the treasury and the first block of one hundred members had been enrolled.

This shows how restless the American public has become with existing conditions, and how eager it is to try to escape from the net cast by monopolists into the great sea of commerce, where the poor human fish are floundering.

Whoever desires to know more of this new Co-operative Association can obtain information by addressing La Prosperidad Colony Association, Chamber of Commerce building, Los Angeles, Cal.
